THE GARDEN OF COLLEGE DAYS

TULANE EX LIBRIS 1906

NEWCOMB
INTRODUCTION.

There's no use in expecting a wonder,
Unless some one makes a big blunder.

Like every college production,
An Annual needs introduction,
Noting Stunts that may prove most amusing,
Encouraging students' perusing.
To

PROFESSOR STANFORD EMERSON CHAILLE, A.M., M.D., LL.D.,

Dean of the Medical Department; Professor of Physiology,
Hygiene, and Pathological Anatomy, Tulane
University of Louisiana,

Whose exemplary character, and ennobling precept, whose scholarly attainments, and active interest in medical education and organization, have ever been sources of inspiration to the student body, and merit the gratitude of the Medical Profession throughout the World, this volume is dedicated in grateful recognition.
STANFORD EMERSON CHAILLE.

Stanford Emerson Chaille was born July 9, 1830, in Natchez, Mississippi; the son of William Hamilton and Mary (Sanford) Chaille. Among his ancestors were many who gained fame in the early Colonial and in Revolutionary times. His early education was completed at Phillips Academy, South Andover, Massachusetts, in 1847. He has received the degrees of A.B. and A.M. from Harvard, of M.D. and LL.D. from Tulane.

During 1860–61, and again during 1866–67, Dr. Chaille was a student in Paris; on the first occasion in the laboratory of Claude Bernard, the famous physiologist.

At the opening of the Civil War, Dr. Chaille enlisted as a private in the New Orleans Light Horse. His ability was soon recognized, however, and promotion followed steadily, until, at the time of his capture in 1865, he was Surgeon-in-chief of the Ocmulgee Hospital, Macon, Georgia.

The United States Government and the medical world have long appreciated Dr. Chaille’s worth. Conclusive evidence of this is found in the number of important positions for which he has been chosen, such as one of the seven civilian members of the National Board of Health, from 1885 to 1893, when it was abolished; and by numerous honors conferred upon him by the International Medical Congresses of 1876 and 1887.

Dr. Chaille is an honorary member of the College of Physicians, Philadelphia; of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland; of the Academy of Sciences, Havana, Cuba; and of the Louisiana Pharmaceutical Association. The Sons of the American Revolution, and the American Medical Association, are but two of the numerous organizations of which he is an active member.

Dr. Chaille’s connection with the University began as a student in 1851. During 1852–53 he was an interne at the Charity Hospital. In 1858 his connection as teacher, which lasts to the present time, began. In 1885 he was elected Dean of the Medical Department, and in 1890 he became Professor of Physiology, Hygiene, and Pathological Anatomy.

Numerous medical journals, especially “The New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal,” of which he was co-editor and proprietor (1857–68), contain Dr. Chaille’s many valuable contributions on medical subjects.

Dr. Chaille married, February 23, 1857, Miss Laura E. Mountford, daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel John Mountford, U. S. A. Mary Laura Chaille (wife of Dr. David Jamison, of New Orleans), was their only child.

Though he has long since retired from active practice, all medical matters have for him a vital interest. And while enjoying the fruits of his well-spent life, he holds the respect and honor both of those of his profession and of all others.

CLASS HISTORY OF 1906.

In a few weeks the Class of 1906 will pass from the University, and its members will take their places among the Alumni. Since its entrance in 1902, the Class of 1906 has been more intimately connected with the life of the University than has any other class. To relate its history would be to relate largely the history of Tulane in the past four years. Its members have been the leaders in every student enterprise; they have been the life of athletics, forensics, and literary undertakings. For four years they have been the undisputed athletic champions of College; during the Junior and Senior years no team has been found willing to meet them. In every phase of student life they have been looked up to and emulated by the other students.

But there is no need to speak of the deeds, reputation, and standing of the Class of 1906; they are familiar to all. With its graduation, the University will suffer a severe loss; a loss that will be felt. However, although the College will no longer feel the influence of the 1906 men as students, it will feel their influence as Alumni. The men are determined that their connection with Tulane will not be severed. Four years of intimate life have developed a love that will not die, and the interests of Tulane will always be their interests. The Class will go into permanent organization, and through this means the men will be kept in closer touch with each other and with their alma mater. As members of the organized Class, and as members of the larger body of Alumni, the present Seniors are determined that they shall do much for Tulane.

What success the members of the Class of 1906 will have in the world, no one knows. But it is reasonable to assume that those who have been so successful in their college life will be successful also in the wider life, for success in the one is largely an earnest of success in the other. We reasonably expect that the graduates of 1906 will, in the near future, rank among the leading lawyers, physicians, engineers, and business men of the land. We are certain that the University will have no cause to be ashamed of them, but that they will confer honor upon themselves, upon the Class of 1906, and upon the Tulane University of Louisiana.

CLASS HISTORY OF 1907.

When we marched into the historic halls of Tulane for the first time as upper classmen, we were prepared to recline in philosophic calm and watch the Freshmen and Sophomores paddle each other. But nothing happened. A few Freshmen exhibited themselves in barrels to Newcomb, and retorted by hurling defiance through the columns of the Tulane Weekly at things in general; but still nothing happened. The derby now sits in stately inappropriateness on the bulging brow of the infant class, unchallenged. The windmill no longer exhibits chameleon hues to the gaping multitude. Not once from the mouth of the tall chimney has sped a rocket in the dead of night. All is gone! And when we seek the reason for these changes we find that there is but one way of accounting for them—that the boys of 1907 are boys no longer, but upper classmen, and that with them has gone class spirit to the upper classes. But for our enforced and thoughtful dignity we might still show a thing or —-, but that, too, has faded into the past. No more at Tulane Night will our colors deck the company from the chorus girl to the star, because Tulane Night has been abolished. Never will the lower classmen mash each other in the glory of a cane-rush, because the Dean does not approve of cane-rushes. Never, if we can help it, will we calculate the angle of "fee" (I suppose you call it "fie," young gentlemen!); or roar at the method of weighing pigs in Arkansas. The time has passed when we made original mixtures in the laboratory, which were far more "volatile" than any known to science; and how long ago it seems when we put a brick and an oyster-shell on Dr. Ivey's desk and sneezed when he scattered snuff with his roll-book.

Those days have gone by far too quickly, and if there are more to follow in our footsteps, with the firm tread of those who made them, it is not our fault. What the University has lost in spirit it has gained in dignity, and the care-worn countenance of the President has brightened with a glow of pride since the Class of 1907 has been duly christened "Junior."

HISTORY OF CLASS 1908.

The duty of a class historian is to narrate with absolute truthfulness the past affairs of his class. The history of 1908 is merely a record of successes, and the duty of reciting these deeds and achievements is indeed a pleasant one. To rehearse all the accomplishments of this Class in a brief history is quite impossible, so that the main difficulty in writing a history of 1908 is in the choice of those events that will do justice to its merit and worth.

The spirit of the Class manifested itself on the very first day that "1908" entered Tulane. In an organized body, the present Sophomore Class marched fearlessly to the College, much to the surprise and dismay of the bewildered upper classmen. Whether it was upon the advice of the Faculty, or for other equally good reasons, there was a noticeable lack of hazing at Tulane during the month of October, 1904. What class at Tulane, present or past, can boast of members of such enthusiastic spirit that they would climb to the top of Gibson Hall and place their class-year on the roof? 1908 is alone in this honor. In all events of college life, athletic and otherwise, this brilliant Class maintained a high standard during the Freshman year.

For some inexplicable reason, the Sophomore year brought a great reduction in its number. In spite of this discouragement, 1908 has gone to work with that distinctive zeal and indefatigable energy characteristic of the Class, not only to maintain its past record, but also to add 1909 to the long list of victims of its athletic prowess. Never has quality so triumphantly overcome quantity than in the annual football contest between the present Sophomore and Freshmen Classes. The representatives of 1908, put forward by a class of about thirty-four men, decisively defeated the team of the Freshman Class, which numbers about three times as many.

We have seen some of the results; now let us investigate the causes. The reasons are twofold: First, there is a universal feeling of friendship between the individual members; secondly, it possesses remarkable class-spirit. It is mainly through the latter feature that 1908 has been so wonderfully triumphant in all its undertakings.

The motto of this Class has always been "Success"—success in athletics, in studies, or in whatever else it may undertake. Truly, 1908 has lived up to its motto. So accustomed have we become to hearing of the victories of this Class that whenever we hear the name of 1908 mentioned we unconsciously associate with it its motto, "SUCCESS."

CLASS HISTORY OF 1909.

It gives an historian great pleasure to write a history of such a Class as that of 1909. He does not have to invent encomiums for his Class; its actions are encomiums in themselves. The Class already holds a unique place in the annals of Tulane University in both scholarship and athletics. On the initial day, the Freshmen proved without a doubt their superiority over the Sophomores. The battle which occurred lasted but a short time. The Sophomores saw that they were overwhelmed by the Freshmen, and hastily retreated. After they were divested of their power they acted like the Indians whose lands were taken away from them by the white men. They would not attack the body of Freshmen, but would lie in ambush and fall suddenly upon three or four Freshmen. Many challenges were sent to them, but none were accepted.

However, the Freshmen have asserted themselves in other ways. On the athletic field they brought themselves to the front. In the L. S. U. game, who made the finest punt? It was a Freshman. In that game, who gained the name of being ubiquitous? It was a Freshman. Again, we see them taking an active part in basketball. One of the finest players on the basketball team was a Freshman. He occupied the position of forward, and is noted for his agility. So in other sports you will find the Freshman asserting himself.

So far we have considered only the athlete; but let us take a glimpse of the scholarship of such a class. The remarkably few resignations manifest a high degree of intellectuality; for no one would continue with his studies at college if he found them incomprehensible. Also the studiousness of those members of the Freshman Class show they do not attend college merely to possess the superficial name of being collegians.

As this Class of 1909 has displayed so many laudable evidences of what it is capable of doing, one may safely predict for it a most illustrious name in the annals of Tulane University.

Reflections of a Senior

I

The shades of night had fallen
On the Senior Students room,
And every nook and corner there
Was draped in deepest gloom.

A grate with dying embers
Threw gaunt shadows here and there,
While the glow revealed the Senior
In a battered Morris Chair.

A table at his elbow
With type-written notes was spread,
They were Lewis' and Elliott's
And "Maras on the head."

He had crammed them in his noddle
Till the sabre robe of night
Had betwined itself about him
And dimmed his sense of sight.

So here he sits indulging in
Reflections of the past,
And events of four long years
Appear before him thick and fast.

He sees himself a Freshman
Lift of step and full of hope,
While his outside waistcoat pocket
Shows a gleaming Stethoscope.

And now from his cerebrum
He removes a hidden peg,
And recalls the things that happened
When he "went up on the leg."

But look! his brow is clouding
Ah! now wonder he has seen,
The ghost of first year Chemistry
And the Spectre of "Hygiene."
A skull upon the mantle
Seems to smile its face away
As the Senior gives a passing shot
To Souchon's "Resume"

Then comes a certain Thursday
When the much respected Dean
Had quizzed him to a standstill
On the functions of the Spleen.

And now he's in the Clinic
And pulls forth from his vest
A pleximeter and hammer
To percuss some victims chest.

See the lachrymal secretion
Shape itself into a tear,
Which is sacred to the memory
Of the Senior's Junior year!

But a point in diagnosis
He remembers with delight,
For he never could forget the pain
"That's always worse at night!"

The gruesome scene possessed for him
He's now upon the threshold
Of a partly open door,
And the thought at once occurs to him
That he'd been there before.

Twas a room filled with cadavers
Lying stark and cold and bare,
While the spirits of Bassini
And McBucney wrestled there.

Sop up he jumped and struck a light,
And ere he went to bed
He had mastered Lewis, Elliott
And "Matas on the head"

Twas well he did, for with these votes,
And the other powers that be,
He'll have the right to sign his name
With this suffix, "M. D."
HISTORY OF CLASS OF 1906.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT, TULANE UNIVERSITY.

It is doubtful if there was ever a group of men who went through such a varied series of events, trials, and tribulations in four years as the band of newly-coined doctors which Tulane has just turned out. If each member of the medical '06 has as many peculiar, exciting, and thrilling experiences with his patients as he had in the halls of Richardson Memorial, he will likely exclaim in despair:

Life is real, life is earnest,
And the gold is not to save—
Spend it freely and be busted;
Let me slide into my grave.

To attempt to narrate the many incidents connected with this Class would require several Jambalayas, and would necessitate the exhuming of some hatchets long buried; so we shall but vaguely refer to some of them. To do so methodically will require three chapters, and the kind indulgence of the reader (if there be any to get this far in this article) is asked for the peculiar classification of the work done and things accomplished during a term of four years.

CHAPTER I.—"Politics."

Perhaps the Class was in no way more noted than for its political proclivities. As Prof. Metz once aptly remarked in one of his favorite "Arsenical Lectures," "Judging from the political activity among you, you should all be coroners some day."

To go back to the beginning, the Class was organized with every man such a stranger to the other that each one felt that he hardly knew himself. The first men nominated were elected, and every one was pleased; that is how Stephens, McKinnon, and Lemkonitz were selected as temporary officers. A month later we proceeded to elect permanent officers for the Class. The temporary officers had not had time to do anything to put them in bad grace, so that Stephens and McKinnon were unanimously elected President and Vice-President respectively. But Lemkonitz was absent, and Herold (who, by some mysterious means, had gained the confidence of the Class in one month) was called to the Secretary's desk. Well, both Lemkonitz and Herold were nominated for the permanent position. It has been said that some of the latter's friends engaged Mr. Lemkonitz in conversation out of the room so as to detain him until after the election. Be that as it may, Herold was present and the other candidate was absent, so you know the result. Shortly after the ballots were cast, Lemkonitz arrived on the scene, and some of the voters wanted to change. President ruled that it was too late.
At the beginning of the 1903-04, political lines commenced to be tightly drawn, and things were strenuous that term. The first-year officers had hardly been seated when schemes began to be hatched out. All kinds of political plans were concocted. During the month of December, 1902, there appeared on the scene one L. M. Thomason, whose melodious voice could be often heard giving cheer to the officers and words of wisdom to the ignorant. This man of destiny was the "logical candidate" for the new Presidency. His friends lost no opportunity of impressing this fact on a majority of the Class, and, strange to relate, they did so confidentially. He was elected on the first ballot at the end of 1902-03 session, and it was during his administration that the Class came into such notorious prominence. At the end of the session of 1903-04 it was time to elect officers for the Junior year. The friends of Thos. Spec Jones had followed the example of Thomason's friends the year before, and had taken "the bull by the horns." Many secret meetings were held during February and March by the self-appointed Jones Campaign Committee. Although he had strong opposition, he won by a good margin, and the Class now had its third honest, conscientious, and painstaking head. We can almost hear Stephens exclaiming, that year at the election time: "Friends and class-mates, I come not to praise, Jones, but to elect him." It was during the Jones term that the Class, and especially some of its members, felt that they were treated "shabbily" on Tulane night at the Tulane Theatre, and let it be known in some very forceful words, which evoked quite a great deal of attention from the Tulane Night Committee and from our brothers at the Academic Department. At the end of that session Mr. D. A. McKinnon was elected President of the student body. This was not accomplished without a great deal of scheming and excitement. It is hoped that under the McKinnon regime all past frictions have been forgotten, and that members of all cliques have left, with only the best of feeling toward each one of their classmates.

CHAPTER II.—"Rowdyism."

The refreshing spring days have come; the brightening days, alas! "If you insult one of our men, you must lick the whole Class."

The above seemed to be the motto, judging from how the Class, so badly lacerated by internal political dissension, would stand together when attacked by an outside foe.

CHAPTER III.—Work.

This year's Class leaves behind it a record of which it need n't feel ashamed. From its Freshman to its Senior year compliments have been bestowed upon it by professors, instructors, and demonstrators. Not only in the examination-room, quiz-room, and laboratories has it done well, but its members have done their share of literary work; also contributing freely to the Jambalaya, Olive and Blue, the Loto Phagocyte, and Medical Bulletin. Some members of the Class are taking partial courses at the New Orleans Charity Hospital, Shreveport, Natchez, and elsewhere, which will leave them over to graduate later; but they will always have a feeling of loyalty for old '06. Let it be arranged that at some future day this Class hold a reunion in New Orleans or elsewhere, that we may again hear in strenuous tones:

"We cut dead men; we cure sick.
Where is the patient we can't fix?
Where are the drugs we can't mix?
Tulane Medical nineteen-six!"

HISTORY OF CLASS OF 1907.

Medical classes are like medical men—there are all kinds and conditions of them. Some are good, many are indifferent, and a few are bad. Each has its own peculiar faults and its own peculiar virtues, for the character of a class is merely the sum total of the characters of the students who compose it. If it is made up of good students, it will be a good class, and vice versa.

In this respect, the Class of 1907 has good reason to be proud. It is made up of good men, and is, therefore, a good class, as the records of its three years of existence will show. In each year it has been faithful, energetic, and painstaking, doing its work thoroughly and well. It has never shirked its duties or performed them in any but a whole-hearted and serious manner. There has been work to do, and it has done it to the best of its ability.

Previous historians have told how the Class, being but an infant, as it were, toddled through the first year of its existence and learned to walk in the second. It is the duty of the present chronicler to tell how, having reached the age of discretion, it strode sturdily through the third. And yet, when one begins to write it down, there seems to be very little to write, after all. The doings of the medical student would hold little of interest to the outsider. Unlike his brothers of the other departments, he takes small part in the general collegiate affairs. His class has no baseball team, no football team, no debating or literary society; it has in place of them an infinite quantity of work. As other people’s work is seldom of interest, the historian will spare the reader a record of of it.

Instead, he will content himself with the brief statement that the road has been long and the going difficult. There have been bright places and dark ones; days of sunshine and days of storm; moments of triumph and moments of despair. There have been successes and failures and trials and tribulations without number. But through it all the Class has been moving straight ahead. And now that there is only one more year of student life before it—“only one more river to cross”—it can say, in the words of the poet:

“I have had my disappointments and I ’ve had my silent fears,
But I reckon that laughs will easy balance all the tears;
It ain’t a brilliant record, but I want it understood
That I ’m still a-keeping even, which is doing purty good.”

HISTORY OF THE MEDICAL CLASS OF 1908.

Tulane University of Louisiana,
Department of Medicine,
1906.

Dear Old Public:

Thinking you would like to hear something of the "doings" at old Tulane, I decided (with your permission) to trespass upon your always preoccupied time for a few moments; and, being familiar with your peculiar fondness for great things, I could not conceive of anything that would be more stimulating to your skeptical brain than a few facts centered upon the greatest bunch of embryo M.D.'s this old college has ever had the pleasure of calling its own—I refer to the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Eight.

Although our existence dates back only to the 20th of October, 1904, we have accomplished great things. Of such magnitude were the above that the Dean and Faculty have seen fit to bestow upon us, within the short period of one year, the most renowned and envied of all titles—Sophomore; the simple epigram that Freshmen fear, Juniors envy, and Seniors respect.

From the moment the functions and activity of life had begun, the Class of 1908 was recognized as an ever-potent factor in the circle of college existence. In every phase of life during this time we have not been seen to be lacking—every move towards the up-building and maintenance of our future alma mater being fully supported. In athletics, being represented by Long, as Assistant Manager of the College Baseball Team, and Connely and Austin on the Varsity Football Team. In politics, we have amongst our number some of the best; while in class-work, though we often succumb to the trials of a long and dry lecture by passing into the realms of dreamland, or in the quiz-room are severely reprimanded by some of "the wise ones" for attempting to introduce into medical science some new feature, appearing as possible to no one but the excited and half-frightened student. Taking all into consideration, our Class has made a most remarkable showing, and during the future years of our college and professional career—just as a bit of advice—I would suggest that you keep your eyes on 1908, as great things are to come.

We began the journey of college life with ninety-one participants, each one being imbued with the sting of ambition, pausing here and there to grasp traces of knowledge to be used when the far-off "Final Day" has arrived and we cast aside the mantle of college glory, and robe in all the dignity of a Doctor of Medicine. Among the ninety-one above referred to may be found men of all descriptions and characters, hailing from all points of this and other countries. Those things of an unpleasant character are usually told with reluctance. However, I would consider that something most important had been omitted should I fail to chronicle a few of the many things concerning the trials of our Freshman life. Anyone to whose fate it has fallen to pass through this stage of college metamorphosis fully realizes what it means to be a Freshman. Many times were we disheartened, feeling as if mere existence was all that could be wished for; as the taunts of an ever-joyous upper classman, always directed at the most penetrating portion of the poor Freshman, are something awful. It suffices to say that this life of suspension and humiliation was brought to a close April 30, 1905.

During the vacation months the members of 1908 spent their time in various ways; some remaining in New Orleans, being engaged in clinical work, while others were occupied with similar work in other places. The opening of college for the session of '05-'06 witnessed the return of the majority of the Class; though we lost a few members, the original number was not only maintained, but strengthened by the addition of several recruits, who, having heard of the Class of 1908, decided to cast their fate with them. With such an acquisition, and possessing those traits that go towards the make-up of an ideal class, you cannot well imagine of anything otherwise than success, and as such the Sophomore Class of '05-'06 has existed.

Would like to probe deeper into the many reasons why this Class is held with such high esteem, but for the present will have to trust to your imaginative powers to reason out, with the above facts, why so many say, "It is the best class I have seen."

As a member of the "Wants Committee," I have an engagement with the Faculty to decide whether or not we will abolish examinations for the Class of 1908, owing to the excellence of said Class. I must be gone. With best wishes, yours, —Historian.

HISTORY OF FRESHMAN CLASS.

A history is a narration of facts, and facts are truths; hence, it is necessary that one should write of our Class both individually and collectively.

On November 2d, when the portals of Tulane Medical Department were first opened to the Class of '09, it became at once evident that it was composed of men well fitted to perform the hereditary duties and obligations devolved upon them. Our Class is proud of its fully-developed men—men in both body and mind, brain and brawn, coupled with strength of will and originality of thought; men who are not only to follow in the beaten paths of those who have gone before, but destined to go down in the history of Tulane as a Class of distinction.

If it became necessary that the historian, in performance of his duty, should dwell upon every deed and achievement of his Class, the higher classmen would complain that he is greedy of space; so only a few of the deeds which go to make the Class of '09 famous shall be noted.

It was the first Class that ever asked for more than two days for Christmas, and although we did not get what we desired, we at least proved conclusively to the student body that we have nerve and that the fundamental characteristic of a Freshman was found not wanting in our Class.

Although we were not asked to add our names to the petition handed to the Dean desiring that more comfortable chairs be substituted for the bleachers now existing in Dr. Chaille's lecture-room, we were not behind the Sophomores in learning the fact that almost anything would be better than those noble old benches, which have stood against the tempests of changing years.

Speaking individually of the members of the Class, we can only say that each one is "a thing of beauty and a joy forever"; each possessing some attribute, either good or bad, which distinguishes him among his classmates.

Now that we are about to put aside our childish ways and become Sophomores, we are fully aware of the fact that the eyes of the world are upon us, and we are more sure that when we are weighed in the balance we shall be found not wanting.

LAW SCHOOL.

CLASS HISTORY 1905-06.

Work began at the Law School this year on November the 20th with a class of eighty-two members, all earnest students and determined to succeed.

Our first meetings were held to try and awaken a real "college spirit" among us, which spirit is claimed to have been lacking in previous classes. Different students spoke on this subject, and tried to make all feel that they belonged to Tulane; were a part of this the greatest university in the South, and that her football games and other affairs were the interests of each student in our Department. These meetings led to an appearance of the entire Class at the Thanksgiving game, where we went together in a special car, and had much fun and enjoyment in so doing.

Our next occurrence of interest was the selection of Class officers and voting for them. For the first time in the history of the Law School it so happened this year that when the time came for voting there was no opposition to the ticket named, it being the unanimous choice of the Class, and it went through in its entirety to the pleasure and satisfaction of all concerned.

On the night of the election, Mr. Armbruster was appointed to place Mr. Robbert's name in nomination, and his address was strong and well spoken. The reply of Mr. Robbert was excellent, and the whole Class became demonstrative and showed what they thought of it and of him as President in every possible way. Surely the memory of this election will give us pleasure whenever we recall it hereafter.

Our Class is exceptional in the number of prominently connected students who compose it. Many are the sons and daughters or close relatives of leading members of the bar in this city and elsewhere, nearly all of whom will enter the offices of these gentlemen upon graduating.

Among these are Miss Louque, the daughter of Honorable Charles Louque, one of our State Senators, but better known to us as the author of Louque's "Digest."

Charles Nixon, the son of Oscar Nixon, who was prominent, before his death, in all political and civic movements, and one of the ablest lawyers here. Mr. Nixon is a graduate of the Academic Department, and will practice in New Orleans when he receives his diploma from the Law School.

Eldon Spencer Lazarus, son of Judge Henry L. Lazarus. Mr. Lazarus made his A.B. degree at Tulane in 1902 and later in 1903 from Harvard.

With us also are Alfred Grima, nephew of the lawyer and notary of that name; Walter C. Parlange, son of Judge Parlange; Edward C. Ansley and Henry Herbert Maloney, brothers of Hubert M. Ansley and Robert J. Maloney; Frank W. Hart, son of Wm. O.
Hart; Joseph H. Charbonnet, nephew of F. D. Charbonnet; Abner Charles Chappuis, brother of E. L. Chappuis; and Arthur H. Denis, the nephew of our esteemed Professor of the Civil Law.

Others who should be mentioned as leaders in all our Class movements are Joseph F. Ward, President of the I. V. Club and Chairman of our Executive Committee; James Casserly, Secretary; John F. Odom, who intends later to locate in Baton Rouge; Arthur Leo Bear, the son of A. A. Bear, well known in local cotton circles; Adam G. Levy, one of Tulane's graduating class of 1905; Edward Richard, our temporary Chairman until the election of Mr. Robbert and other officers; William L. Wooten, an enthusiastic member of the United Sons of the Confederate Veterans, serving at present as one of the general officers of that Association; Benjamin C. Dawkins, James Scallen Gauttraux, and Benjamin Brown Taylor.

Jefferson Parish is represented in the Class by A. W. Gugel, Deputy Clerk of the District Court there, and John E. Fleury.

Nearly all of us are carrying outside work as well as our law studies, but some who are more busy than others are Mr. A. J. Sbisa, to whom we all go for shorthand reports of the lectures. Mr. Sbisa, Mr. Pratt, and Mr. Gallagher, besides their work at the Law School, are employed now under Civil Service in the U. S. Custom House. Mr. Wm. Wright, holding the position of clerk and stenographer in the office of Dart & Kernan; Edward John Ryan, telegraph operator on the Times-Democrat; and Charles Arion Byrne stenographer in the First Criminal Court.

An outline should be given in this history of the creditable things done by the individuals forming the Class, either on the outside, or before becoming members; therefore, the following sketches will be of interest:

Two of us who have been teachers and are going to be lawyers instead are Mr. Unis A. Bell, Class Treasurer; and Mr. Edwin Franklin Gayle. Last year Mr. Bell was Assistant Principal of the Public School in Lake Charles, La.

Mr. Gayle made his A.M. at Columbia in '03, and since then has occupied the position of Assistant Principal in the State High Schools in Baton Rouge, Lake Charles, and Opelousas. He also taught English in the Philippines; Chemistry and Physics in the Southwestern Industrial Institute at Lafayette; acted as Assistant Professor of Latin and English at Rugby; and has at present one of the classes in the New Orleans Evening School.

Jewell Arthur Sperling served in the U. S. Navy for several years; traveling around the Mediterranean Sea, and spending the last two years of his time in the Gunnery Department in China, Japan, and the Philippine Islands.

Two of our members are active on the Football Team—Mr. Berlin and Mr. Magne. The former is fullback and the latter is center on the Varsity.

The Medical Department, as well as the Academic, has contributed to our number. Mr. Bernadas, one of the Pharmacy Class of 1900, having passed second in the State examination of that year, opened two drug stores here, which he successfully conducted until he began the study of law.

The Tulane Law Debating Club was organized on January 26, 1906, to promote a forensic spirit among the members of the Law Class. This organization fills a long-felt want in the Law Department, for ability to express one's views is necessary in this Department, more, perhaps, than in any other. The charter members of this Club comprise the leading orators and debaters of the Class, and it is hoped that a debate may be arranged at some future time with one of the other literary societies at Tulane. The first officers of the Club are: A. Giffen Levy, President; E. C. Dawkins, Vice-President; A. D. Schwartz, Secretary; and E. H. Richard, Treasurer.

Class histories in the past have made no mention of the I. V. Club, which, though a limited organization, is one of the most attractive features of this Department. Our twenty members constitute the Delta Chapter of this national fraternity and carry out its distinctive characteristics, both Bohemian and legal. The Club holds moot courts, with one of its Alumni or honorary members as presiding judge. The training thus given is excellent and shown by the fact that these gentlemen recognizedly form a large part of the backbone of the Class.

Before closing, the "Constitution," which we hope to have some day, deserves mention. Though a good form has been suggested by Mr. Garland, whenever the subject comes up we show much "indecision of character," and, like the little animal in Mr. Herford's "Child's Primer of Natural History," called the platypus, seem unable to make up our minds over just what we want. From present appearances, though, I have no doubt this question will be settled soon and agreeably to all concerned.

HELEN McGLOIN WOOD. Class Historian.
There's not much knowledge left in books
It's in our heads—can't you tell by our looks?
Vale, Neuscomb! we leave thy gates, thy joys to share no more.
Yet in our hearts will still remain loved memories of thy days.
OLGA CZARNOWSKI.

Olga 's a theatre-goer;
She took us once. Would it were more.
At lunch she eats cream;
She coaches the team;
When the bell rings she makes for the door.

FANNIE LOVELL.

There 's a Newcomb Senior called Fan;
Her dressing 's always spick and span;
A maker of rhymes,
A spender of dimes;
Whatever she will do, she can.

VIOLA MURPHY.

An actress, and student of Greek,
Is Viola, and she is quite meek.
To classes she goes
Upon her tip-toes,
Much wisdom and learning to seek.

ANDREE PROVOSTY.

Andree is fond of "peanuts";
Psychology never she cuts;
When she 's in the "gym"
She 's right in the "swim";
The ball in the basket she puts.

ELIZA EMERSON.

We call our school-teacher Eliza,
And greatly does everyone prize her.
In basketball fight;
In German she 's bright;
No teacher you 'd ever find wiser.

BEULAH LOB.

Beulah is bright, I confess.
Does she ever her German words guess?
At singing, a wonder;
Her voice sounds like thunder;
To win the cup she 'll do her bes(t).
CLARA LEWIS.
Clara’s long suit is the kodak.
The Seniors from side, front, and back
One day she took,
And right in this book
You’ll see them, and thus no joy lack.

ELLA HARDIE.
Ella’s an athlete, they say;
At basketball, jumping, and nay,
Even rope-climbing, she
Much more than all we
Grows better and better each day.

NELLIE COPPEE.
A true college girl is our Nell;
She writes for the O. and B. well;
Frat pins she wears;
No teacher she fears;
And also I’ve heard she’s a belle.

EDITH FARRAR.
Than Edith could no one be rarer,
For she for ’06 is the carer;
But I’ve heard she declares,
And often she swears,
That her name shall keep on being Farrar.

EDNA VALLAS.
If you do not stop growing so fat,
Edna, dear, we are much fearing that
We will have to enlarge
Our class-rooms, and charge
Double car-fare and boarding for that.

EDITH FOLLET.
Edith’s a splendid debater,
And if you will wait a bit later
She’ll elocute well,
And of great events tell
In a way in which none could do better.

MARY SUMMEY.
One of us Mary we call;
She’s slender and not very tall;
Though sometimes she’s lazy.
And often she’s crazy,
She’ll get an A.B., after all.
EDITH MARECHAL.

Here is to E. M. a toast:
She of our Class is the boast;
She comes from Mobile,
And knows how to "spiel";
Miss H. of us all she loves most.

TRIX FORTUNE.

To Trix there are many things due—
Money, and compliments, too.
She's a naughty-six straight;
To classes not late;
The goals she makes are not a few.

EDITH GUNBY.

In Edith a student you see,
Of Math., Latin, History;
The girl we call "Hit,"
We all will admit,
Jokes better than B. V. B. D.

RUBY LAWLER.

Ruby loves perpendicular lines,
Physics, and mathematical signs;
She plays well at center,
When a sweater is lent her;
A Prof. all her trouble designs.

NORMA RANDOLPH.

Said Norma, "I swear that I read
That a magazine article said
There is many a tribe
Who in England reside,
Who are wild." "Are you out of your head?"

TILLIE LOEB.

Tillie in classes gets A's,
Her graceful high-jumping all praise;
In Latin proficient;
In nothing deficient;
At her basketball playing all gaze.

SENIOR CLASS OF 1906.

A is for all of the girls in the Class.
B is the best that is in each fair lass.
C suggests Coppee, our agile right guard,
Who works when she works and then rests just as hard.
D begins Dullard, not one will you find.
E stands for Emerson, a very good mind.
F in our class brings a trio to view,
Miss Farrar, Miss Fortune, and Miss Follett, too.
   Edith Follett with her pen can paint
   A picture that would drive away the blues;
   But Trix Fortune is enough to make one faint
   With her everlasting questions of "class dues?"
Then the third whom F must represent,
   Edith Farrar, Senior President.
G stands for Gunby, and also for good;
   She always gets A, or would if she could.
H is the initial for Hardy, the brave;
   As a gay debutante she will make the men rave.
H is the letter that stands for Miss Harkness;
   The 1906 Latins she 's pulled out of darkness.
I stands for intelligent, also industrious,
   And in the future may be illustrious.
J stands for Jack, which every one thought
   It was awful to use; that is, if one 's caught.
K comes next. It means our knowledge
   That 's been a surprise to Newcomb College.
L stands for Lawler, as everyone knows;
   Cutting classes, I ween, is the least of her woes.
   Lewis and Lovell both use this charmed letter;
   The reason, I 'spose, is they could n't do better.
   Both Lob and Loeb at ball excel,
   And they finish the list beginning with L.
M Miss Marechal's best stunt is French.
   When she gets started she 's hard to quench.
M is for Murphy, who is, as a rule,
   Indifferent to things that happen at school.
N N. O. 's for New Orleans, a very good city;
O If Newcomb's is moved it will sure be a pity.
P stands for Provosty, next year's reigning belle.
Q Means it's queer if her debut's a sell.
R stands for Randolph, in history tenacious
   Of facts that alas! prove sadly fallacious.
S is for Summey, her surname is Mary.
T's for the teasing that makes her contrary.
U is for us, the Class which, it seems,
   Has been most unfortunate with basketball teams.
V is for Vallas, a student of fame;
   In Latin or English it's "A" just the same.
W stands for the work we've begun;
   Also for weary, after 't was done.

—X. Y. Z. LOVELL.
SENIOR CLASS HISTORY.

"Joy have thou of thy noble victorie,
And endlessse happinesse.'"

From the time we trooped up the Arcade steps, a band of happy-hearted, care-free Freshmen, confident (and with good reason) that victory was to be ours, until the present moment, crowded with hopes realized, as we stand adorned with caps and gowns, is there a single moment of these four years that we can find cause to regret?

Threescore strong we entered college, and now, when we are nearing the close, there remain but nineteen, many of our comrades having chosen to conquer in other, and perhaps gayer fields. But what a wealth of pleasure, as well as of profit, those of us who stayed have to look back upon!

We remember, with tolerant amusement, the Friday afternoon when we hid the books of the august Class of 1905—a deed our victims thought worthy of basing their class-play upon; and how grieved we were as Sophomores when we lost our first game of basketball—a source of woe, never ours now!

As Juniors, how lustily we sang for the Seniors to march into chapel in all their new glory and as Seniors, how joyfully we sang and are still singing for ourselves!

But we, proud members of this finest Class, have not yet reached the highest point of our renown. Our fame is going abroad, and we will startle the world as journalists, authors, professors, woman-suffragists (some of us have shown remarkable talent in up-holding our rights during the allotment of seats for Tulane Night), a few of us intend to be College Presidents (with capital letters); and the rest will marry Presidents of the United States.

And whatever may be our future lot, we may truly declare to-day that college has taught us to believe, each of us, that

"In the end, I have known how to brave
All disillusion, faced the best and worst;
My hunger have I stayed, and slaked my thirst,
In the hope ultimate, the trust in right."
What's jollier than the season when our Basketball begins again?

THE CLASS OF 1907.

All hail to Naughty Seven's maids,
    Whose match nowhere the wide earth shows!
What brighter eyes and fairer cheeks
    Compete with these, the gem and rose?
Not long were they in making their's
    The college grounds and college halls,
And ere the second week did pass
    Had in all hearts themselves installed.
What makes their charm to last so long?
    It is not what they say or sing;
Yet they may touch, as friendship's gift,
    The heart with lightest leaf they bring.
As classmates, friends, and sisters true,
    Made one by hours of toil and care,
What greeting is there half so dear
    As that welcome which waits them there?
Thus Naughty Seven's banner waves
    So proudly mid fair Newcomb's trees,
And Naughty Seven's name is heard
    Re-echoed by each passing breeze.
And upward, upward will they climb
    To where the mount of glory lies,
While their fair name, for fame renowned,
    Shall stand emblazoned 'gainst the skies.

—DOROTHEA A. SCHMIDT.
We are a very modest Class—too modest to praise our own virtues; but we do not believe in hiding our light under a bushel; and when we are appreciated by those who know us best, we are glad to let the world know it.

You, too, unvexed by toil and strife,
May take a humorous view of life.

THE GOLD AND THE BLUE.

The colors we bear are the tints of the dawn—
    The symbol of all that is bright,
And we see them still at the sunset-hour,
    When the day fades into the night.

The gold stands for youth and the blue for truth
    And courage, whatever our fate;
And, more than all else, they symbolize this:
    Our love for our Class 1908.
HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF 1908.

Like most things in the world, the Class of 1908 is steadily growing older; like a few rare, good things, it is gaining wisdom in an amount stupendously disproportional to its age. For in years the Class of 1908 is not quite two, in enlargement of brain capacity it is Father Time's own eldest daughter.

Even from the beginning of our Freshman days we showed signs of greatness. From the first we grasped the situation of college life and entered on our voyage into the realms of higher education with a perfect understanding of what we had to do. What is more, we did it, and so well that the upper classes were quite put to shame, and the following class has copied us in all possible ways. Besides excelling in the lecture-room and on the campus, we distinguished ourselves in the composing and producing of a drama: the last to be given by Newcomb Freshmen. A good play was wanted to end the series to which every Freshman Class had heretofore contributed, and it follows, of course, that the Class of 1908 was awaited to cap the climax of this series.

But now we have left those paths of Freshman life to others. Although, of course, they cannot be worthy successors (who could be?), still they are harmless, obliging children, and have shown some marks of intelligence insomuch as they have followed the precedent we established of holding two elections of Class officers in the first year. So, because of these attenuating traits, we shall spare them any unfavorable criticisms.

In this our Sophomore year we have absorbed so much knowledge that it is astounding our heads have not puffed out for the accommodation of enlarged brains. If we were like other Sophomores we would boast unstaying, and, therefore, most wearisomely, of our wonderful capacity for learning. The intensity of our work and the consequent strenuousness of our lives have roused the sympathy of all—even of those hardened judges of collegiate scholarship, the Professors. But, however harrassing and difficult the work, you may trust 1908 lives up to its motto, "J 'y suis."

So ingenious are the 1908's that however hardly pressed they are in the lecture-rooms, they still find scraps of time for fun. It's a strange characteristic, is it not? From the Class there has been organized a basketball team, which, although it fell before the redoubtable Senior Class, will show the world great things next year. And then it can be said of us that we are first in play, as well as what we now are: First in work and first in the hearts of our dear, beloved Faculty.

When you are in poetic mood,
    And 'round your fancy muses twine,
Oh, come and contemplate awhile
The latest class on college life,
The class that makes Professors smile,
The Class of 1909.

Greece had beginnings, so had Rome,
    And may we have our starting, too.
Consider not our faults so rare;
Remember not our first-day stare;
But let our record, standing fair,
    Impress you what we'll do.

In basketball we'll records break,
    For e'en our President can play;
And there're two others in our Class.
But hush! We'll let those marvels pass.
Heave hard the ball, don't mind the glass;
    That's those two Freshmen's way.

We might, perhaps, a gym team form
    With Agnes on the Swedish bar;
In stunts our Treasurer does shine;
And our Reporter "chins" so fine;
The good athletes of 1909
    A noble legion are.

In all scholastic matters we
    Are very wise and oh, so bright!
And each Professor gives us praise,
Then smashes up the hopes they raise,
But those are just Professor ways;
    We know they mean all right.
Then as to Newcomb we have come,
   Let us in all things try to shine.
Our fame's already half foretold,
So let each Freshman here uphold
Class honor as a thing of gold.
   Success to 1909!

All honor to us must you give;
   No honor shall we Freshmen lack.
And may we wave our cares away,
And may we conquer every day
With this insignia of our sway—
   The Nile-green and the black!

—DOROTHY ACKERMAN, Class Poet.

"OH! THAT LOOKS LIKE WHAT I GET ON MY REPORT"
CLASS HISTORY OF 1909.

A history of the Class of 1901! Surely I am incapable of writing the eulogy this Class so richly deserves. Only the pen of Homer or Milton could do justice to such an extensive and important theme. But then, who has not already heard of the strength and superior wisdom of this illustrious Class? If there are any such unfortunate ones, to them, it is my duty as historian, to repeat what has been said: "The Class of 1909, like the brightest star in the vast firmament of heaven, eclipses all others by her brilliancy."

When 1909 stood at the threshold of Newcomb, Seniors, Juniors, and Sophomores, alike, rushed to throw open wide the doors of this hall of learning. Never before in the history of our college has there been given to any class such a warm welcome. Not only did our sisters, the Juniors, hold out their arms to us, but also the Seniors, and even our traditional foes, the Sophomores, hurried to do us homage by strewing roses in our path as we entered.

The student body does not stand alone in recognizing our superiority, for the Faculty also hold us in highest esteem. They watch with amazement the progress of this the largest Class that Newcomb has ever produced. Not only in our class-work do we excel, but our basketball material is of such a quality as to cause the Newcomb world to quake with fear at its coming contests with us.

From the day that we planted our flag on the highest pinnacle of Newcomb and saw it triumphantly wave—unconquered by the desperate assault of the Sophomore—it has held, and always will hold, an unrivaled position.

"For we know our flag is glorious,
And we 'll conquer in that sign;
For the Class that 's e'er victorious
Is the Class of 1909!"

Literary Pickings from the "Miscellaneous Box" in the Art School

The autumn leaves are falling everywhere they're falling through the atmosphere and falling through the air.

Repitition is the spice of life.

Birds of a feather gather together.

If you see one patriot, red, white and blue, and you see another, you see a third. Can you and I that?

Why did Johnnie go down to the seashore? He went there because it was low tide.

A HISTORY OF THE GLENDY BURKE.

ANY literary and social organizations have dropped from the sight of man at Tulane in the whirligig of time. Publications, fraternities, clubs, and men have passed like ghosts in a phantasy during the twenty-six years of the Glendy Burke's existence. Founded on January 21, 1880, the Glendy Burke stands as a landmark of Tulane. It stands at Tulane for what the famed ribbon societies stand at Princeton. The thirteen—that lucky number!—founders laid so solid a foundation that nothing could overthrow it. Fathers and sons have been members of it at different periods of its history. It has always stood for conservatism with a capital C.

Tulane was known in 1880 as the University of Louisiana, and the fraternities, the only organizations that then existed there, led a precarious life. Several men conceived the idea of a literary society and accordingly these men—A. S. Wheeler, C. Beard, F. W. Nichols, A. Perilliat, J. T. Owen, E. Venere Martin, J. H. Kennard, Jnr., Johnson Armstrong, M. S. Mason, E. Finney, J. T. Groenevelt, and C. B. Stafford—founded such a society, naming it after Glendy Burke, the eminent Louisiana philanthropist. A. S. Wheeler was chosen first President; M. S. Macon, Vice-President; J. T. Owen, Treasurer; and A. Perilliat, Censor.

The career of the Glendy Burke Literary Society since that notable day has been a glorious one. Its forensic triumphs have been numerous; its work has been characterized by gigantic energy. Its members have served in university debating and oratorical contests. They have maintained, with signal distinction, the glory of Tulane at home and abroad.

We will not say that its ocean of prosperity has not been disturbed by turbulent ripples. That there have been times when the life of the Glendy Burke has been endangered, we cannot deny. Yet it is to the greater credit of the society that all difficulties should have been successfully surmounted, and that the Glendy Burke should now be forging steadily ahead of its rival without the slightest trouble.

The Glendy Burke's latest victories were in the recent debate and oratorical contest with The Forum. In both, the standard of the Glendy Burke floated above the wreckage of The Forum, pointing to a new era of prosperity and strength. The Glendy Burke will welcome additions to its already large roll, and any prospective Freshman who may chance to read this brief history may know thereby that the conservative old Glendy Burke will gladly welcome him into its ranks.

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States should grant to an administrative commission the power to decide, upon complaint, whether a given inter-state freight rate prescribed by a railroad is unreasonable or unjust, and if found to be so, to prescribe, after full investigation, a reasonable and just rate, which should go into effect at once.

It is agreed by both sides:
1. That Congress has, under the Constitution, the right to delegate the power in question to such an administrative commission.
2. That the law should provide for an appeal by the railroad to the United States Courts in the following cases only:
   (a) When it is claimed that the rate fixed by the commission is so low as to be confiscatory; and
   (b) When it is claimed that the commission has exceeded its powers.
3. That the commission should be given the power, on the application either of interested shippers or of the railroad concerned, to change a rate previously prescribed by itself, on the ground that conditions have changed or that experience has shown the rate to be too high or too low.

Question proposed by Texas; Tulane has chosen the affirmative. Debate will be held in Austin in April.

THE FOOTBALL SEASON.

REVIEW of the football season of 1905 is necessarily brief. With an outlook before us for one of the most successful seasons in the history of the University, the yellow fever epidemic upset all expectations. The late opening of college made it impossible to carry out the full schedule and limited us to the one game with the Louisiana State University.

We need not go into the details of why the game was not won. Every one concerned did the best that he was capable of doing under the circumstances. Coaches, managers, and players did good work, and were well supported by the student-body; but a team, trained in three weeks and put into a championship game without a single preliminary trial game, is uncertain and inconsistent at best, and it was to be expected that the players—even the more experienced ones—would show some unsteadiness.

As to the game itself, spectators say it was a contest between teams evenly matched and keyed up to fighting pitch. To a participant, it was more trying than even the most excited on ooker could conceive of.

At first, L. S. U. simply swept Tulane off its feet, and it was only by desperate defense that Tulane's goal line was not crossed in the opening play. Five times the ball was brought to Tulane's ten-yard line and each time it was punted out of danger, the kicker standing sometimes with his back against the fence. But as the game progressed Tulane gradually forced her opponent down the field, and the half ended with the ball in L. S. U.’s territory.

In the opening of the second half, Tulane seemed to have things her own way. Weak points had been found in the opponent’s line and they were hammered until L. S. U.’s fifteen-yard line was reached. Here was the turning point of the game. Tulane lost the ball on the third down, by a few inches, and L. S. U. then began the long advance toward the Tulane goal, not without, however, losing the ball twice within the fifteen-yard line. Then, with ten seconds to play, and after two downs on the one-yard line and the imposition of a penalty of half the distance to the goal on Tulane, the ball was shoved over for the only touchdown, and the score stood: L. S. U., 5; Tulane, 0.

BENEDICTION.
Hail to the pretty Newcomb Girl!

For she is city-born and sound, Clear-

model form and flavor—make her equal

Can't be found—found—
'VE heard of your reputation as the subtiest of flatterers, the most winning of suitors, and the most—shall I say it?—the most daring of flirts. How can you blame me if I don't believe that you were truly heart-broken last Sunday, when you couldn't keep that engagement? You see,——,” but before Miss Beach could finish her laughing accusation Mr. Sturdevant broke in with:

“They have malign me! I am, by nature, the gentlest, most straightforward man that mortal ever knew.”

“I admit that my personal experience hasn't led me to accuse you of being—call it changeable; but you may remember my elder sister, whom you rushed in her Senior year? Among the things she advised me to avoid in college life was this: Never believe that Mr. Sturdevant is in earnest, whether he declare that you are his ideal, or that his dream of Heaven centers around you in the guise of angel. Now!” and Frances nodded her pretty head emphatically to indicate that she considered her argument unassailable.

“But,” protested Von Blarcom, “I've reformed since your sister's day. And you've no cause to complain; you've never even heard my line of talk, have you? No, upon my word! I've meant every single thing I've told you to-night; but sometimes, you understand—well, wait until necessity gives rise to the occasion, and I'll hand you out a bunch of jolly that will convince even you. I've a cracking good line of talk! But, seriously, won't you go to the Founders' Day lunch with me to-morrow?”

“I'll be charmed to, Mr. Sturdevant, but I'm going to help decorate the Sophomore table in the morning. If you come to our table at——”

“Say twelve sharp, and then we can go to the Medical afterward, will you? Ah, Miss Bowman, I'm glad to see you looking well, as usual. I suppose you're going over to the lunch to-morrow?” And the youthful diplomat smiled sweetly at the white-haired Matron of the J. L. H.

“I don’t know! I don’t know! But one thing you must remember: It’s almost ten o’clock, and I always depend upon you, Mr. Sturdevant, to send off all the young men promptly. So finish what you have to say, and be ready to leave when the clock strikes.”

“Yes, indeed, Miss Bowman, you know I always (?) leave promptly. Must you go? Well, Frances, about to-morrow I’ll come to the Soph table at twelve, and, after wandering around a bit, we’ll go out to the Medical and then up to Laura’s, where you dine, I suppose. I’ll be there exactly at ———.” Ten slow funeral strokes of the dormitory clock warned him that it was time for the callers to leave. After clearing the music-room and the two parlors of reluctant young men, Von Blarcom lingered to whisper, “To-morrow at twelve. Goodnight. I tell you it’s a good line of talk!”

Fan went slowly upstairs, with many confused ideas running through her head, but chief among them was the determination to show him what was what if he ever tried his “line of talk” with her. How, she had not decided, but in some convincing manner he was to be shown that she was not to be trifled with. “Fine line of talk,” indeed!

Before daybreak the next morning the six dormitory Sophomores, with Frances in the lead, had risked their several lives in scaling the college roof and stretching, from that point of vantage to the J. L. H. roof, one long cord, which, three distinct times, broke in the center, just as an exultant Soph would cry out, “I’ve fastened this end!” The function of the cord was to suspend across Washington Avenue a huge banner, bearing the inscription, “Seniors, 1904.” Just at breakfast time the feat was accomplished, and every dormitory girl (except the Sophs and Seniors) was planning what scoop her class could spring for that day’s frolic.

By ten o’clock the Sophomore President had come, bringing in tow her big brother Tom, laden with baskets, flowers, table cloths, pennants—and a hammer. Frances and Laura were busy with the table until long after the medicos had marched up Washington Avenue, making the surrounding vicinity resound with the vibrant tones of their band. Then, very hesitatingly, Frances asked, “What time is it, Laura? I’ve an engagement for later. Twelve o’clock? How funny! Oh, oh, yes, Tom, I’d love to go with you, but—but ———.” The remainder of the sentence froze on her lips as her unbelieving eyes recognized Mr. Sturdevant—her Mr. Sturdevant—passing the Sophomore table with a tall girl in black—no, not passing the table, but actually stopping, and, agonies of agonies! Frances, seeing him turn solicitously to his companion, and hearing him murmur, “Have a sandwich? Ham or cheese?” wondered bitterly if the girl’s happy expression were due to a “good line of talk.” She saw or heard no more, for, turning resolutely to Tom, who, by the way, had been waiting particularly for her to come to, she said: “Tom, take me somewhere, anywhere, quick! I’m tired of all this noise!”

Tom, being a wise man and a kind one, attempted no expression of comfort or of sympathy, but conversed cheerfully and inanely on any subject he happened to hit against. His conversation fell on empty, unheeding ears. Frances, seemingly attentive to Tom’s description of an exciting dog fight, was in reality thinking hard and quickly, putting two and two together, fitting in a piece here and there, until she had made out a case so evident that her abundant proof was unnecessary. Her thoughts may have run something like this: "I see now why he couldn't go to church with me Sunday evening! I know now why he likes black so much and is always saying a girl looks better in it than in colors! I 'spose he will take her to the Medical and maybe around the Belt, but she can't go to dinner at Laura's anyway! It will take something more than any 'line of talk' to set him straight after this! I wonder ———. What's that, Tom? Yes, I'd love to go to the Medical. This gets tiresome. Go and find Laura, and I'll wait here for you; no, I tell you, I'll be at J. L. H. I have to go over for my hat. Pass by for me." She ran out of the front gate, plump into Mr. Sturdevant—the same Mr. Sturdevant, but this time alone. Her only answer to his confused grunting was a cool bow and "How are you?"

When she came out of the dormitory a few moments later she found Laura, Tom, and Von Blarcom on the steps—Laura and Tom were so deeply interested in Von Blarcom's excited speech that they didn't notice Frances' approach, and the words that greeted her were, "So you see I was pulled into it." His next words were, "Frances, will you go with me this afternoon, and let me explain later?"

"I'm sorry, but I have an engagement with Tom for right this minute. Coming, Tom?"

To say that the next few hours were unpleasant for all four persons concerned in this story would be like saying that a sizzling July day was rather warmish. Von Blarcom, after his first offer of peace, devoted himself assiduously to Laura, and Frances, having repulsed that first offer of peace, devoted herself more assiduously to Tom. The situation, tense with latent excitement, was not perceptibly relieved when The Girl in Black ran up to Von Blarcom and said: "Mr. Sturdevant, you ran off with my handkerchief! You just must give it to me! Please do! Thank you. I'll see you to-morrow night?"

Frances broke the ominous silence that followed this outburst with, "Come on, let's go home! I'm tired of all this foolishness!" Laura and Tom, with one voice, demanded if she were not going up there to dinner, and Frances' decision may have been due to this remark, carelessly dropped, by Blarcom: "Well, people, I believe I'll leave you at Canal Street; I have some business to look after before I go home to dinner. Sorry, Tom, but I believe I won't come up to-night." Frances' voice broke in clear, "Thank you, Laura, I will come, and telephone to Miss Bowman from up town."

The four boarded a car in silence, and were going to transfer at Canal, but Tom suggested Fuerst and Kraemer. The proposition was not ill-timed, when one considered that instead of a substantial luncheon these four had picked up anything from a pickle to an eclair, and had obtained only a glimpse of the Seniors' salad and crackers. In the restaurant, and later, going home on the St. Charles car, Frances seemed to have regained her usual exuberant spirits, but a close observer might have noticed the regularity with which her remarks were not addressed to Mr. Sturdevant and the manner in which her eyes were frequently raised to Tom's with a little more friendliness and a great deal more mischief than was usual. In fact, Frances ignored Von Blarcom, and flirted with Tom from Canal to Audubon. Then, for Von Blarcom had changed his mind about leaving the party at Canal, a curious procession walked gloomily from the car to Laura's home—i. e., Tom, somewhat mystified; Frances, very jubilant (to outward appearances); Laura, cross and tired; Van Blarcom, one moment gay and the next moody and silent. When the house was reached Frances was about to run on up stairs, but here Von Blarcom asserted himself: "Fan, will you sit down in this chair here? I am going to have a chance to explain, if I take a week about it. Now, you know I wouldn't have done it on purpose, don't you?"

"Done what?" Frances was still standing.

"Sit down a minute, and I'll tell you. I'm sorry it happened, and I would have done anything in my power to prevent it. Don't you know that?"

'You're sorry what happened, and don't I know what? I don't believe I understand, Mr. Sturdevant."

"Well, listen. To-day's Founders' Day, isn't it?"

"Yes, I believe so. Don't you think it's getting to be a nuisance? All day down there in the hot sun, eating trash, and ———."

"To-day is Founders' Day, isn't it?"

"I believe so," very impatiently, "but if you wait a minute, I'll ask Laura. Oh, Laura, is to-day——?"

"Will you please let me explain it all to you? I am in earnest, and I think you ought to know how it was——."

"Please do tell me all about it, from the beginning to the present day. I think every student at Newcomb should know all about the college's history, why Founders' Day is commemorated, and——."

"I'm not talking about Founders' Day! I'm talking about to-day!"

"Well isn't to-day Founders' Day?"

"O-o-oh! I'm trying to say that I am not talking about Founders' Day in general, but about this one Founders' Day of 1904 in particular. I am sorry it happened, and I want to apologize and tell you that I am ashamed of the way I acted, but——."

"Mr. Sturdevant, if you can not be more explicit, I must beg you to stop this meandering conversation. Don't you think our table was effective to-day?"

"Are n't you mad?"

"Why should I be?"

"Because I—because I—why, did n't you care?"

"Did n't care if what? You are too complex this evening. But you were saying——."

"That I think you are very mean to trip me up and keep me from explaining what I think you ought to know. It was this way—are you listening?"

"Indeed I am! It was this way. Now, hurry up and tell me all about the founding of Newcomb. I have to make haste and dress for dinner. You were about to say?"

"That I'm tired of this! You know I broke an engagement with you to-day?"

"Founders' Day?"

"To-day! This morning! At noon!"

"Did you? Why did n't you tell me you had an engagement with me? I went with Tom."

"Fan!"—and this time the tone was very low and firm, but very dangerous—"Fan, let's drop all this. I know you're sore about it, and I'm here to apologize, but I can't stand much more. Please listen to me!"
“All right; I’ll pay attention to every syllable.”

“This morning I was coming through the Newcomb gate to meet you at twelve o’clock, when Tony Matthews came by with two girls. He stopped, introduced me to one of the girls, and said, ‘Come on, Sturdevant; you and Miss Cameron come with Rose and me to get something to eat,’ and before I could explain he and Rose had moved on ahead. Now, could I leave the girl right there by the gate all alone without a soul? Of course not. And as there was no ‘lost and found’ department handy, my wisest course of action was to catch Tony as soon as possible and unload the girl onto his hands.”

“It must have taken you a long time.”

“It did, Frances! Tony had vanished, and I give you my word that as soon as I had fed the girl I hunted up her absent escort, and had just excused myself on the plea of another engagement when I met you going over to the dormitory. I am honestly sorry, and I think you know that I would n’t willingly hurt you, don’t you?”

“I don’t know,” very low.”

“Well, I would n’t. Ever since I met you at that Junior German I have thought of little else—you, you, all the time, you! Now you see, don’t you, that I could n’t possibly mean to break an engagement with you?”

“Why not?”

“Because I—don’t you see how hard it is for the man? I want to speak, and yet I am in honor bound to leave what I would say unsaid.”

Fan leaned forward in her chair and spoke very rapidly. “Don’t you think it is hard for the girl, too? Since that Junior German night I, too, have thought of little else. It was you, all the time, you! And when you broke the engagement to-day, even that had no power to make me hate you, because ——.” She paused in confused silence.

“Because what?” and his voice trembled with eagerness.

“Because ——. Oh, I must go up and get ready for dinner.”

“Fan, do you mean what you have just said? Is it really hard for you?”

Again the girl spoke rapidly. “Von Blarcom, I suppose you think I’m very frank to tell you in this way that I care for you, but the truth is that I can’t help it. There! I’m going up stairs.”

In his excitement the man had risen and was standing before the trembling girl. “Frances, I can hardly believe it. There must be some mistake. Why, dear, what’s the matter?”

“I don’t want to go up stairs. I want to stay right here with you. I—ooh, oh, goodness!” And to the man’s consternation and amazement two tears trickled dolefully down her cheeks. The situation was tense, and Von Blarcom knew that in one minute he should either have to take his hat and leave the house or try, at least, to kiss away those tears. “Frances!” and in his excitement his words came in a whisper, “Frances, my dear, I love you, oh, so much, and I’m going to be a better man for loving you. When can I see you again. It must be soon! Sunday? At church? My dear little girl, you’ll never regret this day, I hope.”

Now, in the reaction of his tremendous excitement, an incredulous, cynical wonder crept into his mind. Did she really mean all she had said and looked? People didn't generally take him up so quickly; but he supposed he'd have to ———.

The train of his thoughts was suddenly broken, when he looked up and saw Frances at the foot of the stairs, gayly surveying him, and smiling an inscrutable, quizzical smile—a smile that meant mischief for some one. As he was wondering at the sudden change in her manner his self-satisfied complacency about his easy conquest was completely destroyed by Fan's laughing query: "How do you like my line of talk?"

A TOAST.

I.
Of all the honors which time has brought,
Those that were longed for and came;
Of all the honors we've earnestly sought,
There's one at the height of our fame.

II.
In days long ago when castles we built—
Dream castles in wonderful Spain—
There was one whose turrets e'er seemed to tilt
Toward an end we scarce dared name.

III.
As we moulded our life in the first few years
Of college troubles and fun,
We kept in view, through smiles and tears,
That parchment with brain-threads spun.

IV.
Now our castles of dreams are tall and straight,
On elementary rocks they stand;
And the time draws near when a kindly fate
Will smile on our chosen band.

V.
So here's to the honor we fought for and won,
For which we loved to pray;
"To that far-off, elusive, approaching diploma,"
The sheepskin, forever and aye.

AN OFFICIAL REPORT OF A FACULTY MEETING.

(Grafted from the Official Records of the Faculty, in the Custody of Chancellor Bruff, in the Depository of the University, Wherein All Important Documents Are Kept.)

MEETING of the Faculty was held last Wednesday in the Faculty room. The meeting was called to order by President Craighead at half past four, and Dr. Miller, President of the Association for the Promotion of Peace on the Campus, was introduced as the first speaker. He spoke in touching terms of the peace and good will which existed between the different residents of the campus, remarking that nowhere before, even in the age of Pericles or Xerxes, had the Angel of Contentment spread her loving wings, sheltering beneath the divine flock from all discord, as she had now done on Tulane Campus. Loud and long applause testified to the deep impression which his masterly oration had made upon his audience.

On application, Professor Rugan was given the floor. The nature of his business was entirely unexpected and came as a thunderbolt, spreading darkness and confusion where before light and order had prevailed. Professor Rugan said that a huge billy goat, belonging to his neighbor, Dr. Craighead, had for several nights past visited his back yard and eaten many valuable articles off the clothes-line. Among these were at least six red woolen undershirts, which he was in the habit of wearing. In no way could their disappearance be accounted for except that the goat had digested them.

Dr. Craighead denied the charge "in toto," asserting that the goat was always kept indoors at night in order to furnish amusement to the younger members of his family.

After much discussion and the sifting of many technicalities, it was decided to send for the goat to ascertain, if possible, any signs of the undershirt. Mr. Bruff, having been sent for the offender, entered the room a few minutes after, riding astride. The beast was then made fast to the door, and Dr. Lehrman was asked to recite some passages from the "Anabasis," which he did with such pathos and eloquence that the accused was overtaken with hysteria, violently coughing up large red particles, which, after a brief examination by Professors Caldwell and Beyer, were pronounced to be "pieces" of the red undershirt itself. In the face of such evidence, Dr. Craighead pleaded guilty, and, on promising to replace Professor Rugan's undershirts, the matter was dropped.

306
Professor Fortier then pleaded for recognition, which, after a vote on the matter had been taken, was reluctantly granted. Professor Fortier said that his residence was next to that of Professor Deiler, and that he was continuously annoyed by the German songs, which Professor Deiler's cook was accustomed to singing. Furthermore, he said that oftentimes, when engaged on problems of the utmost importance, when writing poems, or when studying the history of his German relatives, his thoughts were continually interrupted by the harsh strains of "Die Wacht am Rhein" on "Vaderland." He said that the singing of such songs was revolting to his aesthetic sense of beauty, and that he thought that the soothing strains of "La Marseillaise" would sound beautiful floating across the magestic campus. It was resolved that a French cook be obtained for Prof. Fortier, who should retaliate by singing in French to Professor Deiler's cook.*

Professor Ficklen next claimed a hearing. He explained, in his usual "charming style," that his little boy Aleck was in the habit of playing "peachstones," which consisted in standing off and artfully throwing peach stones into a hole, which, he remarked, was a very harmless form of amusement. He said that lately some of the younger members of the Faculty, among whom were Drs. Ivey and Kohle, had engaged in the game with his son, and at the end of the game had run off with little Aleck's peachstones. It was decided that all residents using peaches should save the stones for little Aleck; and so matters were adjusted.

At this point Dr. Smith perceived a stick of taffy in Mr. Bruff's pocket, and, by general acclamation, Mr. Bruff was compelled to "divy up."

On the call for further business, Professor Beyer was given the floor. Professor Beyer advocated, in the strongest terms, the establishment of a "canteen" on the campus. He first proved that, physiologically, the "canteen" was necessary, stating that all environmental phenomena, exhibited on the part of the organism, were mere specializations, as it were, of the acquired characteristics; that the primordial cell had lived in a liquid environment, and that therefore it was but natural to find this tendency exhibited to a high degree in man and beast. Professor W. H. P. Creighton, U. S. N., objected strenuously to any such proceedings, saying that when he was at Annapolis no such thing existed, and, furthermore, he founds things different when he got out. He stated that you must not comprehend things, but you must see them, and thought the "canteen" would make us "see" things; these things would not be in harmony with the dear old ideals of Annapolis. Professor Beyer then made known the fact that once the absence of a "canteen" had caused him to inoculate himself with a culture of "bacillus anthrax." A gasp of horror passed from most of the members, and immediately a motion was made and carried that a "canteen" be established, but that it be called "A Dispensary for Medical Purposes." Rounds after rounds of cheers went up from the assembly, showing the universal approval with which the members held this measure.

Professor Sharp was the next complainant. Professor Sharp said that he was awakened every morning by some one, probably Professor Aldrich, who was in the habit of arising about 5 a. m. and cutting grass in the neighborhood of his (Professor Sharp's) home. On inquiry, the offender was strangely found to be Professor Aldrich. When asked what he had to say in his defense, Professor Aldrich, after taking a huge piece of taffy from his mouth, said his answer was yes and no—yes, that he arose at 5 every morning, and no, that he disturbed Professor Sharp. Further, he said he would like “to throw out a few suggestions”—such, that nature had prescribed an eight-hour labor law for humanity, and it was for everyone “to work out his own salvation.” He then told a joke (?) about his chum, President Eliot, of Harvard, which, though for once it was “germane to the subject,” fell so flat that he was unanimously pitied and exonerated from all of his former misdeeds.

As it was now getting late, Professor Levi Washington Wilkinson was allowed the floor for a few minutes only. He stated that his business was both official and important, both to the community and to the University. He said that as a member of the Board of Directors of Leland University, a place of learning for the intellectual advancement for our colored brethren, he had been instructed to submit to the authorities of Tulane a plan for the merging of the two institutions. Fortunately, this is all the further Professor Wilkinson progressed. He was interrupted by ejaculations, spasmodic eruptions, and terrific outbursts, ranging all the way from a bull fight to a meeting of the Era Club. “It’s all bosh!” exclaimed Dr. Caldwell, the learned and venerable member of the Faculty. “Perhaps,” Professor Brown was heard to mutter, as a lasso, skillfully thrown by Dr. Craighead, missed the speaker by a slight margin. At that moment a flock of spirits, thrown by some unknown person, hit the lights, which immediately were extinguished. And as the meeting thus adjourned in tumult and darkness, from the midst of the crowd came the calm voice of Dr. Smith, reciting, in feeling tones, a Babylonian love song.

HAZING.—Realizing that the lack of a scientific course in the above has been a great drawback, and that an institution of our calibre should fall into line, a committee is at work to prepare a thorough course, which we hope to offer matriculates of future sessions. So far they have been quite active. Negotiations are pending with the McIlhenny Sauce Co. to supply tabasco; the Frisco tracks have been declared official, and the Old Basin will prove a suitable pool for drowning purposes. If the committee on their Eastern tour are successful in securing a proficient incumbent for this new Chair, we will soon read about ourselves in the newspapers. Hume is the man.

INTERNE WANTED.—At Bigblow Hospital. Must be an A.M. and M.D.; have had practical experience in surgery, general practice, orthopedics, and other practical branches; must be able to speak four foreign languages, milk cows, and keep books. THE TULANE DRUNK QUARTETTE.

Throughout the bygone ages—
The whole kaleidoscope of time—
No choir has ever carolled
Like the subject of this rhyme.
Since Mother Eve soothed little Abe,
Or Samson lost his bet,
The world has missed the singing
Of the Tulane Drunk Quartette.

A tenor sweet, from Tennessee,
   Came drifting down this way;
A bass from Texas’ hell-bound plains
   Blew in that selfsame day;
A baritone from foreign climes
   Turned up to take his role,
And East Feliciana sent her bugle-toned soprano
   To blend these three and make the four one whole.

They did n’t have a baton-man;
   They could n’t sing by note;
They ’d just rear back and shower out
   The music from each throat.
The street cars stopped to listen then;
   The cops were moved to tears,
And Neptune swore it beat galore
   The music of the spheres.

They had no special place to meet
   Nor time for practice-drill;
Each man could always sing his best,
   And did it with a will.
Sometimes they ’d sing before exams,
   Sometimes when stars grew dim;
It mattered little when or where,
   Or rag-time, reel, or hymn.

For four years Tulane knew these four,
   And naught-six knew them last.
They ’ve scattered to the winds again
   Their records—failed or passed.
We ’ll never hear them sing again
   This side old Charon’s beat;
We ’ve scattered to the winds ourselves;
   We ’re earning bread and meat.
But when we’ve crossed to Pluto’s realm,
And paid the Stygian debt,
We’ll expect to hear the warbling
Of that Tulane Drunk Quartette.
They’re bound to be there singing
And they’re bound to do it well.
For their future growth and greatness
Who can measure? who can tell?

President.
We pay particular attention to the proper raiment of young men—men who find it hard to be properly suited elsewhere. Our young men’s clothes are built just as carefully as our men’s. This accounts for the very large patronage we enjoy from college men. The “snappy” things young men care to wear will all be found here as soon as on Broadway. Clothes, Haberdashery, Hats, Shoes.

GAS.

Why are there over 10,000 Gas Ranges in use in New Orleans?

Because they give the best results in cooking.

See the Gas Company.

When Benjamin Franklin and his kite brought electricity from the clouds he little dreamed that in the 20th century the electric current would have become a commercial necessity.

Yet to-day, to properly illuminate your store, you must use the electric arc and incandescent bulb, and your factory is antequated if it is not fitted with modern direct connected electric motors.

You literally burn your way into the mind of the public by using a sign of glowing lamps at night and keep yourselves and others cool in summer by means of electric fans. 'Phone our expert, 175; he'll call around and tell you how cheaply all this can be done.

BUILD

When you look upon this great city did you ever stop to think how it was built, one brick at a time? Luck did not jump full grown to its greatness.

Yet some people are waiting for fortune to fall full grown in their laps. Ninety-nine fortunes out of a hundred are built one dollar at a time. You have to start building and keep on building.

Open an account with us, add to it each week. We will help build it by allowing you
