Volume XIV.
Here you’ll find our pot-pourri,
Made of mirth and jollity,
Jokes and songs of college days,
Pictures of our college plays;
Take this then, with our good will,
Read with joy and pleasure till
You have lost your heart entire
To our ’09 JAMBALAYA.

"For just experience tells, in every soil,
That those who think must govern those who toil."
Tulane is growing large and great,
Her sons are gaining fame,
E’en her doctors and her lawyers

Fast are making wide-spread fame;
And her Newcomb loyal daughters
Come to join the throng,
Undertake in cheerful manner to help Tulane along.
Let me tell you this prosperity
Truthfully is due to a certain “Faculty,”
You may judge its worth is true.
"Men famed for wit, of dangerous talents vain, Treat those of common parts with proud disdain."

And now to the Alumni come,
    The mainspring of the whole;
Each son and every daughter
    Helping onward to the goal.

They bring the brick and mortar
    With which we wish to build;
And they themselves the workmen
    Are, the fittest and most skilled.

And into that work they put the spirit
    That some of us have called "Tulone,"
And from it does evolve the College
    Worthy to bear the glorious name.

Onward, then, you mighty workers!
    Onward, upward, forward! Ye
Undergraduates, remember
    Some day you'll Alumni be.
"I've been so long remembered, I'm forgot."

[WORDS BY MOLLIE M. DAVIS.]

Air, "My Old Kentucky Home."

TULANE.

On the Mississippi rolls by the cotton and the cane,
    Going down to the Gulf, going down;
It takes to its breast the humming and the strain
    Of many a busy town;
It hears as it goes the song of the rose
    On the edge of the flowery lea,
And the unforgotten lays of the old plantation days,
    And bears them away to the sea.

CHORUS.

Wait awhile, Mississippi;
    Oh, turn your tide again!
While I sing a song to carry far away,
    A song of fair Tulane;
While I sing a song to carry far away,
    A song of fair Tulane.

Tulane looks out on the river as it flows,
    Going down to the Gulf, going down;
Her breast beats fast for the glory of her past
    And the pride of her young renown,
And her glance sweeps on to the splendor of the dawn
    Of an ever-brightening day,
When her name shall rise in a hymn to the skies
    And echo the lands far away.

CHORUS.
Seniors grand and Seniors mighty
Own the earth, yet think it flighty;
Things material they despise,
Only things ethereal prize.
This earth is much too sordid,
And the pursuits here too low;
So to regions high and lofty
They on eerie wings would go;
They would mount to higher regions,
Where all Knowledge reigns supreme;
Where their ideals are realized—
Let us hope it's not a dream.
"Experience joined with common sense
To mortals is a providence."
The Class of 1909 began in the years 1887, 1888, 1889, and 1890 with the appearance of many precocious children. These unusual children will account, in later years, for the many feats of genius at Newcomb, otherwise unexplainable.

At the age of two such characters as these were noted: one child was showing signs of being a second Jenny Lind; several vaulted from crib to crib with great agility; two were debating in Latin; while some others were discussing a new magazine and a swimming-tank. These youngsters were carefully nurtured unto the age of college life; they were then carefully collected by Dr. Dixon and placed (even as diamonds are placed in golden settings) in H. Sophie Newcomb College.

As Freshmen they were, of course, very well behaved; they bowed meekly to the upper classes, and wore the regulation bows and pumps; their locker-keys and lunches were put in the keeping of their sister Class '07.

Their Sophomore year was not uneventful. After coaching the new Freshmen in the ways of the College (removing the gongs off the College bells and other such slight amusements as these), they occupied themselves with basket-ball.

The Junior year marked the beginning of many new activities at Newcomb, among which were:

I. Establishment of the Newcomb Glee Club;
II. The shower-baths.

In their Senior year the following installations took place:

III. The Newcomb Athletic Association:
   (a) Basket-ball,
   (b) Crew,
   (c) Tennis,
   (d) Track Team;

IV. The Latin Club;
V. The Students' Club;
VI. Banjo, Mandolin, and Guitar Club;
VII. The Odds and Evens Debating Clubs;
VIII. The Newcomb Arcade.

Here the record breaks off abruptly. But we may safely prophesy that the Class of 1909 will stand among those of the Alumnae whose interest and work will ever be alive and active in the undertakings of their Alma Mater.

Boat Song.

1909, all hail!
Spread our Viking sail,
And adventuring let us go,
For the wind tugs hard,
And the coast, rock-scarred,
Shoals our home-fire burning low.

Our hearts are bold,
And we've fairy gold;
What better shore could there be?
So fain would we forth
From this hemmed in North
To roam the wide blue sea.

Dear Dimple-cheek, she Shall captain be,
And Calm-brow shall be mate,
And Almond-eye-blue,
Our pilot true,
To Japan would carry us straight.

Then, Clear-gray-eye,
Climb the masthead high,
The truest Norse of us all,
With Latte-alack
And little Blue-black,
For none of you fears a fall.

And all of the rest
Shall pull with the best
For the port of Never-can-be,
The pleasantest isle,
Though you seek long while,
Over the sun-blessed sea.
"There may be worship without words."
Academic Senior Class History.

FEW MORE MONTHS and our life at Tulane will be ended, and we will step forth as men, to make our own way in the world. The past will be but as a dream to us—a dream which, however, will have left impressions upon our minds never to be erased, no matter what befall us in our struggle with the world outside.

This is the last time we will set down our history in the JAMHILAYA; but far be it from the Senior Class to set down boastfully its achievements of the past; our record shall do this for us, and to that we refer you.

In our days or hours of despondency these memories of our early achievements will flit across our minds, and will cheer us and spur us onward to greater things. Again, we will have them beside us in our hours of triumph, there to applaud and congratulate us on the added glory we have achieved for old 1909.

How pleasant indeed will these memories be when, scented before the fire, lost in reveries of the past, we ponder how, as timid Freshmen, we knocked upon the portals of Tulane, eager to join the ranks of those who were already battling with the Genii and Dragons of Learning! Of course, we were quite sure that we would soon outshine them with the great light of our understanding, and would vanquish our enemies in a single conflict.

Then again, as Sophomores, strutting boldly about, scarcely deigning to glance at our more timid brothers, the Freshmen! How well we performed our all-important duty of introducing our younger friends to the weird and mystic rites of college life by initiation!

Wasn't that a glorious night on which we completely annihilated them in the annual rush for the tank? And that tug-of-war over the pond, in which contest we treated the Freshmen to a bath; and our scholastic victory in a debate with them—the first forensic struggle ever had at Tulane between the two lower classes! How indeed these memories crowd upon us, each striving to outdo the other in claiming our attention!

But now the scene changes. We have entered into the dignified period of our lives. We are Juniors. We pass along with dignified step and demeanor, admonishing the too intrepid Sophomore, or advising the timid Freshman. Our bumps of Freshman conceit and Sophomoric importance have been well smoothed out by the phrenological treatment given us by the more learned Professors. Here again we showed our great ability by organizing a Junior-Senior debate, the first ever held.

Again the scene changes in quick kaleidoscopic succession. What is this scene which now presents itself to us—a long row of boys clad in loose flowing garments with square-looking caps on their heads? Ah! now the procession moves closer, and we see that they are the Seniors—the envy of the Juniors, the admiration of the Freshmen. Now we see ourself walking along, scarcely able to keep from smiling in self-satisfaction as we glance about us at the vast crowd assembled to witness our glory and triumph. How our heart beats and our body trembles as we walk down to receive our diploma amid the cheers of the assembled multitude! How fervent is the hand-shake of our father! How sweet and tender our mother's kiss! How kind and friendly the congratulations of all about us as we step from the platform!

And then our reverie ends; not willingly, however, for sweet would it be indeed, could we sit and dream forever of these the happiest days of our lives.

"A wise physician, skilled our wounds to heal,
Is more than armies to the public weal."
History of the Class '09, Medical.

Four long years have elapsed since the stork presented the Class '09 to "Chaillé, Dean," saying: "These are the chosen sons of Æsculapius. Prepare them well for the arduous duties of their noble profession. The health and lives of many thousands shall be entrusted to their keeping. They shall preside at the sick-bed and have power over life and death. Prepare them well."

From that good day to the present time we have labored unceasingly and have succeeded in enriching our minds with many of the sacred truths of medicine, which are now securely stored away in the gray matter of our cerebrums. Our knowledge, quite profound, is unquestioned by the laity, and even the Faculty admit that we are learned far beyond our years. Our Professors have always expressed the greatest praise for our accomplishments and for the brilliancy of our intellects. We proved our superiority over the Class '08 in a competitive examination for internships in the Charity Hospital. Of the thirteen interns selected last year, eight were chosen from the Class '09, while only five were selected from the Class '08.

It has been said that the greatest benefit to be derived from a college education is the acquirement of that ability to successfully explain to others that which you do not understand yourself. This was partly true of our Class in their comprehensive elucidations of the larval circuit of the ankylostoma duodenalis, and in enumerating the minute details of the matas obliteratorive endonanymorrhaphy with partial arterioplasty. All modern books on surgery will record the fact that we first perfected the theoretical technique of the famous operation for cholecystenterojejunostomy. There are many other wonderful achievements which lack of space forbids us to mention. Let it suffice us to say that our record as students is without a parallel in all the past history of Tulane.

In future years, when sitting by the family fireside, enjoying the aroma of a good cigar, lost in revery and meditation, we wonder if our sentiments will be expressed by the following lines:

Last evening I was talking
With a doctor, aged and gray.
Who told me of a dream he had,
I think 'twas Christmas day.
While snoozing in his office
A vision came to view:
He saw an angel enter
Dressed in garments white and new.
Said the angel, "I 'm from heaven;
The Lord just sent me down
To bring you up to glory
   And put on your golden crown;
You 've been a friend to everyone
   And worked hard night and day;
You 've doctored many thousands
   And from few received your pay.
So we want you up in glory,
   For you have labored hard,
And the good Lord is preparing
   Your eternal, just reward."
Then the angel and the doctor
   Started up towards glory's gate,
But when passing close to hades
   The angel murmured, "Wait;
I 've got a place to show you;
   It 's the hottest place in hell;
Where the ones who never paid you
   In torment always dwell."
And beyond the doctor saw there
   His old patients by the score.
And grabbing up a chair and fan
   He wished for nothing more;
But was bound to sit and watch them
   As they sizzle, singe, and burn.
And his eyes would rest on debtors
   Whichever way they 'd turn.
Said the angel, "Come on, doctor,
   There 's the pearly gates to see."
But the doctor only muttered,
   "This is heaven enough for me."

Braswell, W. Cicero, A.B., Elba, La. — "George Wash, Jr." He is game with the ladies.

Littell, Isaac F., Opelousas, La. — ΔΟΑ. "Feminology is my specialty." The man with the placid smile.

Gill, W. Gregg, Clinton, Miss. — Class President, '05-06; Intern Charity Hospital. "Just look who I am!"

Hyde, A. Sidney J., A.B., Unite, La. — ΗΚΑ. "R. F. D."; "a live question." Wonder if he will ask St. Peter any questions?

Russell, Grover C., Daniel, Miss. — The mother's boy. "Please, Dr. Dyer, let me go home."

Phillips, Wm. D., Lakeland, La. — ΦΧ, ΣΧ. "Pretty," and well was he dubbed. Intern Charity Hospital.

Prosser, Joseph T., Alexandria, La. — Will argue with anybody on anything, whether he knows anything about it or not. What he doesn't know, Osler and Da Costa fail to record.

Brannin, Edward B., A.B., Dallas, Tex. — ΦΔΘ, ΦΧ. "Brannie," the nurses' favorite; the scribe for Prof. Matas. Where did he get the zebra suit? "Lewis, is my hair parted straight?" Editor-in-Chief Jambalaya, '08-09; Secretary-Treasurer Class, '08-09.
Miller, Edward T., Newton, Tex.—XZX. The pugilistic kid. Can’t forget that he wore the Matas splint.

Cooper, Albert S., Alexandria, La.—“The Infarct.” The Lord intended him to be a man. Stunted.

Faivre, Geo. W., M.Ph., New Orleans, La.—ΔOA. “If at first you don’t succeed, try, try again.”

Lafferty, Elbert E., Gurdor, Ark.—Interne Charity Hospital. The old maids’ favorite. Wouldn’t kill a cockroach.

Box, Chester C., Dothen, Ala.—ΦΒΗ. From Dothen—not exactly Dothen, but eighteen miles in the suburbs. A doctor in talk and a farmer in walk.

Moers, Richard H., M.Ph., New Orleans, La.—ΔOA. Interne Charity Hospital. Always ready to offer suggestions. What Dr. Gessner fails to know, he asks Moers.

Hand, Albert P., A.B., Shubuta, Miss.—KA. A little boy gone to the bad. Malnutrition, marasmus, and rickets.

Cole, J. Clifton, A.B., Brandon, Miss.—AKK. President Class, '08-'09. Dignified in class-meeting. Once a country school-teacher, but keeps it concealed.

Kostmayer, Hiram W., New Orleans, La.—ΦΧ. Interne Charity Hospital. “The strawberry blonde.” Always gets another fibroid for the Class.

Bailey, P. Sanford, Warren, Ohio.—ΦΚΨ. ΦΧ. Has the grace and elegance of a Polish prince.

Kory, Roscoe C., A.B., New Orleans, La.—Class Editor JAM-HALAVA, '05-'06; Interne Charity Hospital. The man behind the “Dock.” Why has he not?—“The white cloak.”

St. Martin, Thaddeus L., Houma, La.—AKK. Interne Charity Hospital. Ambitious in a social way, but admits he is entirely too slow.
Dawson, Harris P., Montgomery, Ala.—KS ΔΧ. "How's the Bump, kid?" Aspirated and found blood; autopsy showed aneurism. Socially, a lion; mentally, a Solomon; hospitalily, a house surgeon.

St. Martin, Hugh P., Theriat, La.—AKK. "Old Daddy Saint." Reminds one of Mother Goose on Butterworth's clinic day. Is budding late, but will bear flowers.

Salerno, Emmanuel F., New Orleans, La.—"Sally." "In onion there is strength."

Keller, Alfred H., New Orleans, La.—ΦΠΙ. Interne Charity Hospital. Led the Hospital—How? ('Nuff said.) "Dr. Bell, let me aspirate that man for oedema of the lungs?"

Legg, John Vaughan, Elkmont, Ala.—ΦΧ, KA. Popular, but not handsome.

Rew, Chas. E., Shreveport, La.—The Dean. A good advertisement for a hair-restorer. Who said he sat in the first row?

Michael, Jeffreys C., New Orleans, La.—Aspires to pugilistic honors. Copy boy for Krause & Co. We don't know where he is going, but he's on his way. Has latest dope on "skoits."

Leidenheimer, Henry, New Orleans, La.—Interne Charity Hospital. His hair is not red, his complexion is not auburn, but his name is "DENNIS."

Staton, D. Eli, Swanlake, Miss.—AKK, ΣΧ. His girl says he is the candy kid. His stride is the exact width of a corn-row.

Beyt, J. Lamar, Moreauville, La.—Better known as "Bite." Spends one hour per day combing his hair; outside o' that, he's all right, though.

Fontenot, Gilbert G., Ville Platte, La.—Calculus-hunting was his long suit.

Blackshear, S. M., Robeline, La.—4X. Interne Charity Hospital. We wish we knew him better; he's so distant.

Butler, Timothy J., Vicksburg, Miss.—Sazaracs, gin fizzes, and cocktails. Makes himself conspicuous by his absence.

Burkett, Wyatt T., Dothen, Ala.—A good preacher spoiled to make an indifferent doctor.

Miller, Weston P., Carencro, La. — PhiPi. "Little Rufus." The spaghetti kid; the Dago girls' idol.

Lett, Frank M., M.S., Eclectic, Ala.—Phi, SigmaE. Instructor in Physics and Chemistry. Loves to dream of country sausage. Twenty-four fried oysters, piece of pie, and a cup of coffee.

Wade, J. Lavelle, D'Arbonne, La.—Would be of value in the pediatric service.

Rogers, Frank A., Forest Home, La.—The worst thing we know against him, "He's from Alabama."

Adams, James M., Locust Ridge, La. — KA, AKK. Oh! why did he amputate the moustache?"

Hoge, Arthur F., Mena, Ark.—Class Editor Jamblaya, '08-09. Alopecia medico mentosae. Would-be hospital intern. Who said he cried?

Johnson, M. Franklin, Midland City, Ala.—Said to be a lady-killer. No fatalities so far reported.

Boyd, John T., Summit, Miss. —Delta Omega. Secretary-Treasurer, '06-07. Get him to tell a joke, and hear him laugh.

Nabers, Samuel E., D.D.S., Birmingham, Ala. — Alpha, PhiX. "Waiter, bowl of antitoxin soup, couple of vaccinated eggs, and a glass of distilled water."
Knolle, Kinc k C., Industry, Tex.—AKK. "Comin’ thro’ the rye." Being from Industry, he 's' not far behind.

Morvant, Michael F., Ph.G., Jeannerette, La.—ΦX. "His dignity doth hedge him in."

Carter, Roscoe O., B.S., Morehouse, La.—ΔOA. Mulford’s goods, Hosiery, Post-cards and Quills. "I insist I don't know, Dr. Lewis."

Chapman, Chas. H., Geneva, Ala.—Historian, '08-09. "I'd rather sleep than eat." "Bill, give me a cigarette."

Gamble, Paul G., Guntown, Miss.—ΔKE, ΦX. "The bashful, long-legged boy." Gambler by name, if not by nature.

Fisher, R. Herschel, Evergreen, La.—His chief joy in life is cheering Guthrie. "The busiest idler in town."

Dey, W. Pettus, M.D., Pine Barren, Fla.—ΦBl. A windjammer from Florida.

Brown, Fred. T., New Orleans, La.—ΦX. Captain Football Team, '08-09. For "dope" on legs, see Brown. (Tulane’s left tackle.)

Wise, Samuel P., Plains, Ga.—ΚΣ, ΦX. Interne Charity Hospital. Very wise; looks twice before he jumps—then decides not to jump.

Watts, Eli M., Texarkana, Tex.—ΔOA. The ladylike man. Spent a fortune buying talcum powder.

Robards, Eugene M., New Orleans, La.—ΔOA. We met him yesterday.
Wallace, James E., New Orleans, La.—ΦΒΠ. "My Thesis: Uncinariasis and Matrimony."

Wright, Thomas E., Simsboro, La.—We pity his children if they sit under Dr. Dyer.

Tenney, W. P., New Orleans, La.—"He have went from among us."

Page, Boney W., A.B., Teachey's, N. C.—AKK. "A lily of the valley; would not steal a kiss from his grandmother."

Page, J. Herbert, Red Water, Tex.—The chorus girls' delight. Supporter of Chinese restaurants. Soon to be married and also a member of that famous Tulane-Texas Club.

Hardy, Julian C., B.S., Lecompte, La.—KA; ΦΧ. Class Editor JAMBLAYA, '07-08. Assistant Chemical Laboratory. A knocker from L. S. U.; take him back to Baton Rouge.

Lockett, Basil Lee, Henderson, Texas.—A friend to everybody. Expects to do evangelistic work among the colored brethren of Africa.

Gill, A. Mack, Clinton, Miss.—Class Editor JAMBLAYA, '06-07. The chap with the Risus Sardonicus. On account of his gilded teeth, this fellow will be valuable at autopsy.

Guenther, Frank J., Moulton, Tex.—XZX. Expert in Cowology. The only one of his kind.

Nix, James T., Jr., New Orleans, La.—ΦΘΠ; ΦΒΠ. "Professor." Interne Charity Hospital and one of Matas' splints. Is trying to sell his half interest in Charity Hospital. "He shoo is soft."

Brooks, William F., Jr., Crowley, La.—AKK. Desires to be transferred to Sophie Newcomb. A nice kid he is, and is guaranteed to shine in any society. Also "loves his tea."

Rush, M. Albert, B.S., Mississippi City, Miss.—ΔΟΑ. Tulane's Ichabod Crane. Has his hair cut after the fashion set by Prof. Archinard. An admirer of Dr. De Buys.
Reynaud, Brunner B., M.D., New Orleans, La.—ΣΧ. Leader of the Hammer and Anvil Club. He never smiles, but sometimes his face slips.

Goodall, Claude L., Bisque, Texas.—XZX. Farmer, philanthropist, cow-puncher, and an intimate friend of Bryan.

McDonald, R. Clarence, L. I., Bells, Tenn.—XZX. "The man from Glengarry."

Childress, Hermann J., M.D., Gilmer, Texas.—"Wooly from Texas." Says barbers are not known in his neck o' the woods; a good fellow, nevertheless.

Warren, George T., Union Church, Miss.—ΑΚΚ, ΚΣ. Noted for his good looks, red hair, and big "chaws" of tobacco.

. Hunt, Earle H., Clarksville, Ark.—XZX, ΠΚΑ. Class Editor Jambalaya, '08-'09. Any kicks to be made about these statistics, see him. If you don't find him in front of Holmes', cross over to Cusach's. Insisted on knowing what Lett was doing in the bath-tub.

Bayle, Jules J., New Orleans, La.—Dignity! Dignity! In him, thou art personified. Has never heard of Gillette, the razor-man.

Davie, Nicholas T., Blocton, Ala.—XZX. "Nux Vomica." He doesn't make much noise, but covers the ground.

Elebash, Clarence C., Selma, Ala.—ΦΚΣ, ΦΧ. "Jew Baby." "Fellows, when I was to V. M., I—" (Hasty exit everybody.) "Oh, you Jew!" Has aspirations, and is foolish about his prospects of living in Selma.

O'Connor, Fleming J., Jackson, Tenn.—ΣAE, ΦΧ. "Pat, the eye-man." "Aind't it?"

Carey, Victor, D'Arbonne, La.—The sport. Loud ties, fancy hose, and that sweater—that's all.
Yeager, Van Glenn, Alexandria, La.—The biggest grader in school; equals Joe Baily of Texas. For notes on any Professor, see him.

Fowler, Wirt D., Liberty Hill, Texas.—The Texas Club President. "A head so hard would scarce be scarred by impact with a comet." "Quite" the freak.

Lynch, Charles P., Pendleton, Texas.—The front-porch favorite. Developed emphysema from blowing foam off coca cola.

Martinez, Norman D., A.M., White Castle, La.—Believes that Red Rock whisky will make a rabbit fight a cow.

Gibson, John S., Collins, Miss.—Wanted: "A boarding-house that I have never tried."

Rougon, Isadore B., Chenal, La.—You can't judge a man by his looks.

Nichols, Everette O., Lockney, Texas.—XZX. "Dr. Nickholes." Has a habit of getting his hands in the way. Speaking of overcoats—well, his speaks for itself.

Enochs, Robert J., Crystal Springs, Miss.—ΦΦΨ, AKK. "Bobby." Vice-President Class, '07-'08. The drug-store blonde. Special attention called to his "spex," "settin'" astride his nose.

Brock, Gibson F., Moscow, Texas.—Fell off the water-wagon, but has managed to get on again.

Buchanan, Charles C., Collins, Miss. —ΔΩΑ. Vice-President Class, '08-'09. Believes in moving and not paying board; can change boarding-houses on three minutes' notice.

Hardy, H. W., Newton, Texas. —XZX. If fat was music, he would be a whole brass band.

Eroche, W. J., M.A., Raceland, La.—May be seen on Canal any time with his coat turned wrong side out. Will defend Hunt while he receives kicks regarding these statistics.
Just as little Freshmen come to be great Sophomores,
Undergo great ordeals to reach upper classmen shores,
Naughty little Freshmen, who bow to Sophomore reign,
In due time they too will Sophomore title gain.
On a not far distant day likewise will the Juniors greet Reward long looked for, now at hand—when Seniorhood they’ll meet.

Junior Class History.

The History of the Class of 1910 dates from October 1, 1906, when a mighty band of Freshmen, then unknown to the other Classes, passed through the gates of Newcomb College. This new army of people, possessed of beauty, genius, strength, and talent, and composed of the natives of Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, and various other States, had a large problem to face: this was to conquer what was to them new territory, called "Newcomb." Needless to say, 1910 was brilliantly victorious, and is now enjoying the fruits of her success. My dear readers, please don't think that what we have said or what we intend to say further is conceit on the part of the Class; it is merely a repetition of facts, known so well by the Faculty and student-body of Newcomb, as well as the world at large.

From the very first few weeks at College the Faculty realized the worth and courage and strength that endowed the new-comers. As the chronicles show us, our Freshman year was noted for its quality and the defeats of the many subjects we "tackled." We shall not attempt to illustrate any one victory, as a limited space is required.

Our career as Sophomores was a most brilliant one. The army marching under the colors of Olive and Gold began to be feared. Our intellectual knowledge, as is found in the reports of the Faculty, was most amazing. Our many discoveries in Chemistry and Physics, our numerous historical outlines, and the multitude of English essays which took their shapes in the forms of nightmares, have all been remembered and have added much to raising the standard of our Alma Mater. Then that wonderful defeat of the Pump Law and the fall of the 1911 banner have placed us high on a pinnacle from which we shall never descend.

Since we do not wish to create an ill-feeling among our fellow-students, we shall make no mention of the athletic quality of glorious 1910. This subject is a very disagreeable one to discuss, so we shall favor the College as a whole by keeping quiet.

Two brilliant years have passed by, and we have now entered the most delightful of all—the Junior. We realize the responsibility laid upon our shoulders, and are doing our best (and feel sure we have succeeded) to set an example to the rest of the students. We feel thoroughly justified from the respect and cordiality we receive on all occasions. We have already made a name for ourselves in the Evens; and, as one has already remarked, the very best talent in the Glee Club is found from this Junior Class. You will find that in the future our athletic and dramatic abilities will be most praiseworthy; believe me when I say this.

Now we hope that in after years the name of the Class of 1910 shall be so glorious that it shall never be forgotten at Newcomb.

Let us all join in and cheer the dearest of all Classes, that of 1910.

1910! 1910! This is our cry!

V-i-c-t-o-r-y!

One-a-zipi! Two-a-zipi!

Zipi-zipi-zan!

1910! 1910!

Beat us if you can!

A Strain from Orpheus' Lyre.

I.
The Inspiration.
When Music's power had soothed his weary soul,
When tender sounds brought calm unto his heart,
The strains of Orpheus gained their farthest goal,
And from his lyre there rose, with mystic art,
A theme whose sweetness filled the earth with joy;
And he whose voice could move trees, beasts, and men—
Could calm the raging Furies, and destroy
A sinner's thirst; could stop Ixion's wheel,
And stay the falling stone's long, endless course—
Gave forth a song that made all creatures feel
That in this strain there was a magic force.

II.
The Theme Is Borne Aloft.
With gentle murmur through the endless air
The magic theme was borne with holy love,
And, treasured in charmed realms with tender care,
It slept; and while it slept the spirits from above
Enriched its sweetness with a sacred strain.
And as the years flew by it grew in strength;
Its pathos grew; its sad, its sweet refrain,
Grew mellow in its age, until at length
It ripened, and the time drew ever nigh
When, in its glory, it would reach the earth,
And, raising forth its voice, would sound on high
To celebrate a deed of wondrous worth.

III.
The Melody Bursts Forth.
At last there came a day when through the air
The melody burst forth in all its glee,
And over the earth no strain so sweet and rare
Since Orpheus' time had wrought such harmony.
And on this day all creatures felt its spell;
All listened, and in ev'ry living heart
Came joy. A magic power seemed to dwell
Within this strain, which was indeed apart
From earthly music; and this wondrous song,
Reverberating, sounded forth again
To celebrate, in accents sweet and long,
The glory of the Class of Nineteen Ten.

JUNIORS
Academic Junior Class History.

The Class of 1910 is as well known for its modesty as for its many other virtues; but for the benefit of the public we will now attempt to relate a few of its deeds.

In the latter part of the memorable year of 1906, there came to Tulane campus a large number of strange Freshmen; Freshmen who, instead of being weak and timid, were strong and aggressive; who, instead of meekly awaiting the onslaught of the Sophomores, bravely advanced to the attack. Then occurred a fight that will long be remembered by all those who took part in it. The records that we made in foot-ball, track, and the other athletic events of the year have already been recorded in previous years. We won everything that we went into.

The next year came around and it was up to us as Sophomores to show the "babies" their places. No one can say that we were in any way backward in doing this; for, when we got through with those "Freshies," there was not one but who thanked his lucky stars for having come out alive. We maintained our reputation in the field of athletics without much trouble, and even sent our foot-ball team out on the road, winning for us the championship of three States.

When, at last, the present year came around, we Juniors retired from the play-room, leaving it for the "babies" and their "nurses"; and turned our attention to more important things, the affairs of the College. A Junior was needed for almost every important office. Who is the present base-ball captain? A Junior. Who is the track manager? the base-ball manager? the foot-ball manager? Juniors all. And who is the only man at Tulane that holds a Southern record? A Junior.

The Juniors not only excel in athletics, but also in other things. For who but Juniors are at the head of the literary pursuits of Tulane University? We see members of the honorable Class of 1910 Speaker and President, respectively, of the Glendy-Burke and Forum debating societies. And then, again, we see a Junior as Managing Editor of the Tulane Weekly. As all this can not be accidental, everyone must acknowledge that there is certainly some "class" to the Class of 1910.

Nor must we forget the Juniors from a scientific point of view. We have with us inventors, discoverers, zoologists, and several other curious specimens of manhood. A piece of glass has been invented by a manufacturer of liquor, who is among us, that becomes the color of any light that is passed through it. We made our greatest discovery when a crowd of mathematicians jumped on the tail of a parabola, and went to infinity.

The only regret of the Junior Class is that we have only one more year to help Tulane along, but it is our most sincere hope that when we are ready to go, there will be at least one class that will be able to continue the great work that we have started, the upbuilding of "College spirit at Tulane."

MEDICAL JUNIORS

"NOBODY KNOWS WHERE POOR PUSSY HAS GONE... EXCEPT BROTHER..."
History of the Class of 1910.

The Class of 1910, contrary to all other Classes who have written their own histories, is composed entirely of human beings. We have no Hippocrates or any other of the great spirits among our number, but all of them are men worthy of the great calling they have chosen to follow.

None of them aspire to attain the places accorded the other men in their Class histories, but all of them expect to live and work among their fellow-men, and to better their condition by aiding the suffering and the sick.

Nor do any of them expect to discover the Fountain of Youth, or to revolutionize the study of Medicine; but as the tiny coral insects, one by one, give up their lives to form the great coral islands of the ocean, which afterward become the dwelling-places of men, so each of our Class expects to contribute his part to the advancement of the great work being done by the medical profession to promote and better our civilization.

Our Class is one of exceptionally good workers, as there were very few who came back this year with any conditions.

Nor were we backward in Athletics, as we were represented on the Varsity Team by Moore as full back and manager of this year's Team and captain-elect for next year's Team, Bean as left guard and Yeates as right guard. These men played their positions with credit to themselves and to the Olive and Blue.

Several of our boys are acting as assistant demonstrators, under Professors Bayon and Mann, in the uptown Medical Department, and have done their work creditably.

Our Class is the first one to elect the Class officers without any political scheming and tricks; but when the time comes for election we always nominate the ones we think best fitted for the offices and elect them.

There is seldom found such goodfellowship as exists in our Class; and, while we do not make any unreasonable demands, we are always ready to stand together on things which we believe to be right.

In brief, our Class is made up of men of true worth; men who will go out from Tulane and fill important places in the field of life, and stand for those things which tend to raise the standard and promote the usefulness of the medical profession.

With Apologies to Wordsworth,

Behold her single in the field,
You achieving Sophomore lass,
Reaping—and singing of the victory
She has won o'er the Freshman Class;
Alone she 'cuts' and binds the Freshman,
And sings a bright, triumphant strain.
O listen, for the school profound
Is overflowing with the sound!

No nightingale did ever chant
More welcome notes to Sophomore bands
Of students in some college haunt
Among university lands;
A voice so thrilling ne'er was heard
Pronouncing to Freshman the vindictive word,
Breaking the silence and the spell
That ever o'er Freshmen dwell.

3.

Will no one tell me what she sings.
Perhaps these triumph numbers flow
For great and happy far-off things.
Oh! Yes, the Freshmen know!
Or is it some more cruel lay—
Familiar victory of the day,
Some natural sorrow, loss, or pain,
That has to the Freshman come again.

What'er the theme, the maiden sang
As if the song would have no ending;
I saw her singing at her work
And o'er a Freshman bending;
I listened motionless and still
And then a groan I heard—'twas ill—
And, as I mounted up the hill,
That murmur in my heart I bore;
It was a Freshman's stifled roar.

Preparation and Properties of 1911.
Experiment No. 21.

To a mixture of 31 Regulars (U R, B,) and 34 Specials (O Y R U,), add slowly four months of Freshman work, marking leniently.

Great cold is produced as well as great activity. The substance does not break up.

Add more rapidly four more months, marking strictly.

An increase in activity is noticeable, the substance becoming clear.

Pour into a vacation and heat with the quick flame of a summer; cool slowly.

Usual production of cold. The substance becomes a clear crystal.

Test with the 1st of October.

The substance melts rapidly, changing in color to a rosy pink and then to true blue.

The mixture has become a compound with entirely new properties. The shifting is due to the fact that the action is not yet complete.

The substance collects in the form of groups of girls on the Arcade and in the halls. The properties of Regulars are most noticeable.

1911 is a solid.

1911 works hard and obtains good results.

1911 stands the most severe tests, becoming all the more solid.

1911 makes as much of her play as of her work.

1911 is not afraid to come back to work. 1911 is in earnest.
Add four months of Stoney English, Lyonine Physics, Chemical Heroism, and a Compulsory Elective.

Add another 4 months of each of the above-mentioned elements, together with 1 month, 11 days of Basket-ball and 3 months of Dramatics.

The substance boils violently at first, then settles down to a steady bubbling with occasional puffs of steam.

Great cold; renewed activity.

Loud, clapping noise; the steam assumes the shapes of laurel crowns

Examine.

? Not complete.

1911 knows how to accept and make the best of the inevitable.

1911 is courageous.

1911 never says die.

1911 is applauded and her worth recognized.

Examine.

1911 is?

SUMMARY.

1911 may be prepared by the action of a fair mixture of earnest-minded Regulars and Specials upon any and every branch of knowledge.

The necessary degree of earnest-mindedness is almost impossible to reach.

1911 is clear-minded, square, true, active; showing a remarkable affinity for Basket-ball.

1911 turns 1910 blue and 1912 green.

[N. B.—This experiment is incomplete, a two-year period being insufficient time in which to complete such a work.]
"Carpe Diem."

TO THE CLASS OF NINETEEN ELEVEN.

Some of us dream of the victories to come,
The joys of a cap and a gown;
While the honors we find within our reach
Slip through our grasp and are gone.

Still others mourn the chances passed by
In which they did not their best,
Forgetting this present will soon be the past,
While now they their duties neglect.

Let us not through our four years of college thus pass,
Losing much of its pleasure and fun.
For in wasting the present how soon we will find
That, though Seniors, we've left much undone.

History of the Class of 1911.

The history of the Sophomore Class presents an evolution; this evolution is to be evidenced in two ways: both in a diminution of numbers and in an improvement of individuals. In Professor Barnett’s phraseology, “The two may be said to have proceeded in an inverse ratio.” On the first day of our college life, October 1, 1907, eighty names were enrolled; the number of these names has dwindled down until only forty remain. It could not be said without reservation that only the best men remain (our modesty blushes even at the statement); but it is nevertheless true that a system of culling and elimination has been pursued by most Professors. To-day the Class is small, but homogeneous. We are few, but chosen.

The historian might (as so many historians have done heretofore) relate the many victories gained by the Class in competition with the Freshmen; but he will say nothing of the first day’s battle on the campus, nor will he give any details of the crushing defeat the Freshmen suffered in the annual Sophomore-Freshman foot-ball game. If it were not possible to conclude from so much other evidence, the mere fact that 1911 has been at Tulane longer than 1912 would attest Sophomore superiority.

It would seem that the Sophomore Class has given more of its attention to college enterprises than to class rivalries; not that it has neglected the latter; it has considered the former far more important. Indeed, an intense love for Tulane distinguishes ’11. Its members have added no little luster to the name of the University. Dreyfuss and Smith represented us on the Foot-Ball Team. Who shall say that this was not the finest of representation? Dreyfuss is probably the greatest half-back Tulane has ever had, and Baker Smith was a great factor in winning many games during the past season. In forensics the Class has established a precedent. It has been an unwritten law that no student should try for the ’Varsity Debating Team until he had reached his Junior year. It remained for the Sophomores to challenge that law and to destroy it utterly. This year two Sophomores have not only entered the preliminaries, but have been retained for the ’Varsity Team. Finally, it may be said that in musical activities the permanence and success of the Glee Club is due to members of the Sophomore Class.

In closing, the historian would pay his last tribute to that body of hard workers who are the backbone and mainstay of the Class; to those untiring students who have measured up to higher standards than those of any previous Class; to that silent band among us who have aided Tulane to take a place in the first rank of American universities.

In accordance with a decree from the relentless master of circumstances, custom, the Sophomore Class of the Medical Department beg to submit to their friends a brief account of the course of events within our domain since last session.

October 1st marked the date of our reassembling to duty, and from the direction of all points of the compass came the members of our Class back to their field of work, each loaded with good resolves and a desire to see this college year one of our most prosperous sessions. On our arrival in the Crescent City we were confronted with such wonderful improvements and extensive alterations in our college environment that it took several days for us to fully realize that we were under the same régime which developed us from laymen to the first stage of the Doctor; but when that small trouble was overcome, our Class, as one, set about putting into effect the good resolves and intentions brought back on our return.

In enjoying such a reputation as ours there is great satisfaction and much pleasure, but we do not wish it understood that we have reached the pinnacle of our ambition; we merely wish our friends to know that from the patient, persistent effort on our part, supplemented by the kind assistance and direction of the Faculty, together with the great facilities of Tulane for teaching the mysteries of the Healing Art, we have gained as much toward perfection as is consistent with human effort. We have much to encourage us in our efforts when we review the work done by our institution in contributing men of merit to the profession, and then compare present equipment and facilities with that of former times. We are enjoying first service under the prerequisite literary training required by our school. We are profiting by greatly improved and in every way modern equipment, appliances, laboratories, enlargement of Faculty and broadened courses. We have advantages unparalleled in the South and in many respects in the United States; and we are resolved to make our Class one of high standard and great usefulness, equal to the merits of our opportunity. When we consider the many things from which we are profiting, we not envy those who are more advanced in their course than we, for we realize that time is long and art is precious, and that we are promised as much in proportion to our efforts and opportunities as others have been granted in proportion to theirs; hence we have much to be content with for the present, and much more to expect from the future.

We wish our friends of the other departments to know that we have greatly enjoyed the year spent with them in the majestic environment of the campus, and we assure them we shall never forget their sincere friendship and the perfect harmony that has existed among us throughout the year. We trust that we may live to see the efforts of every present Tulane man crowned with success equal to that of her Alumni, and our lives equally as useful to mankind.

Among our Freshman colleagues we wish it understood that we are friends from whom you can derive much inspiration, encouragement, and promise.

We regret that we can not render as extensive an account of our affairs as we should like to; but, since such is our misfortune, we promise a continuation of our report in the next JAMBALAYA. In the meantime we wish our friends progress in their courses, prosperity in all their undertakings, and happiness always.

Respectfully,

THE SOPHOMORE CLASS,

Per Historian.

And now we come to our little one,
To her pleasures and her fun;
Her histories and her pictures,
We'll review them one by one;
We'll read the poems she has writ,
The songs that she has sung;
And if they not the others equal—
Remember, she is young!

But they're full of sparkling brightness;
They gleam with Freshman wit;
They ring with spontaneity,
And that delights a bit.
For there're Sophomore days when sense of victory
Fills us full of deep delight,
And there're Junior days that make us feel
A sense of our own might—

For there're Sophomore days and Junior days
And Senior days, it's true;
But there are no days like college days
When college days are new,
So here's a toast to our Freshman days,
The best of all, I see,
Where the best of times and the purest fun
Reign ever most supreme!
“My salad days,
When I was green in judgment.”

Newcomb Freshman Class History.

While I pondered, weak and weary, as to how I should tell of the great deeds we have done and of the infinitely greater deeds we intend to do, I must have nodded a bit, for when I opened my eyes, Billiken was sitting on the table before me. He grinned and winked at me as he reached for my pen.

"On October 1, 1908 (hardly a Freshman is now alive but remembers that famous date), the Class of 1912 entered Newcomb. Their banner waved on high from the Arcade. Oh, where was that of the Sophomores! Did a little bird whisper, 'In the gutter'? The Class of 1912 entered with more Regulars than any other Class has ever had. Worries and work awaited them—enough almost to exonerate them for failing to smile (which, you know, is a terrible crime). They plunged bravely into the fight, however, and exams have proved that they did their work nobly. Philosophers tell us that work should be mixed with play. The learned Juniors evidently believe this, for they entertained their younger sisters (most charmingly, too). The new Class was also 'dined and wined' [Billiken winked at me] by the Y. W. C. A. In numbers, in athletics, in play, in work, in everything, the Class of 1912 has held its own. 'Il s y sout.' With such a past, I predict for them a great and glorious future."

Thus wrote Billiken, the God of Things-as-They-Ought-to-Be. As he wrote, so they are; and as he predicted, so they shall be in the Class of 1912.
The Vicissitudes of the Freshman Class.

There was once a class at college,
Not so long ago I ween;
Girls therein from town and city,
Each one eager, gay, sixteen.

As they come with books and tablets,
Everything so shining new,
Older classmen punched each other,
Saying, "See the verdant hue?"

Presently their groans were rising
Over Latin, German, Math;
Blessing out each college teacher
As they strolled up Wisdom's path.

Soon their pile of books diminished;
Cries were heard, "My English—you!"
"All my French is lost completely!"
"My log-book and pencils too!"

Locker-keys they lost the first week;
Gym shoes fled from mortal gaze;
And it seemed as if things walked off
In that golden college haze.

The excitement each felt keenly,
Joining every College Club:
Latin, Banjo, Glee, and others;
And the dues—ah, there's the rub!

So these maidens toiled and suffered (?),
Making more friends every day;
Each adoring some grave Senior—
Can you blame them, anyway?

Do you know them at old Newcomb?
They've class-spirit strong and right;
Each girl loves with true affection
"Nineteen Twelve, the Red and White."

Elizabeth Clarke, Class Poet, '12.
Tulane Freshmen - 1909 -
The Freshman Class came up to Tulane on October 1st, and started their brilliant career by administering a defeat to the Sophs in the wrestling-matches, and showed that they were right there with the goods. It is to their credit to say that before evening they were a well-organized body, and had elected officers, and things began running smoothly for them right away. A few weeks later the Freshmen again proved their supremacy over the Sophomore Class by winning the tug-of-war; and no longer were the words "Freshie" and "Baby" heard around College. In fact, things were somewhat reversed. In the Freshman-Sophomore game we were defeated by the score of 18 to 0; but, this was mainly because the Freshmen had had very little experience in this line, and contented ourselves with the fact that our brother class had defeated themselves by the same score the preceding year.

In our studies we had the same success as in Athletics, the majority of us doing fine, and I think we gained the love and respect of all our Profs. (???)

Well, here's wishing all the luck in the world to the Newcomb Class of 1912, and just watch us get the tank.

Wall, Henry H.
Medical Freshman History.

WHO IS HE?

He has trousers turned up "sky-high," a bunch of books, a matriculation card, and a "Traveler's Aid" pocket-book.

He is cheerful, robust, intelligent, and athletic.

He has one foe (insignificant at that)—1911.

He is a gentleman.

He leads in foot-ball.

He is a master of histology.

He has troubles all the time.

He is first to class in the morning.

He never complains about food in the refectory; nerves do not need to be inhibited in order for him to have an appetite.

He enjoys the sights of New Orleans.

He is a college man.

He never stays out at night.

He is a Prohibitionist.

He refrains from indulging in friendly games.

He takes great pleasure in studying physiology.

The more work, the better he likes it.

He is good-looking.

He is "candy" with the fair sex.

Who is he?

Mr. Medical Class of 1912.

Æsculapins, from his bejeweled throne on Mount Olympus, looks down with admiration upon the Freshman Class and pronounces them as his worthiest sons, for their pathway has been strewn with pearls of success and the victor's crown awaits them in the "Temple of Knowledge."

I.

In the following pages, pictured and named,
Is a band of strange creatures of wonderful power;
Through the length and the breadth of the land they are famed
For the magical gifts Nature gave them as dowser.

II.

As a rule (though not here), they carry strange sticks
Which are tipped at one end with something like fur;
They have queer-colored messes which the fur softly licks;
This they rub on blank paper—lo! wonders occur.

III.

The wonders are pictures, and why they appear
Is that these strange creatures know how to impart
To their simple utensils a something most queer—
By no others attained—a magic called "Art."

IV.

The genus possessing this power is rare;
The species just here the best species known.
Turn then these pages, and regard with great care
This one of the prodigies Newcomb has grown.
"In framing an artist, Art has thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed."

Law.

There's no one dares dispute them,
They are so full of knowledge;
Through torts and jurisprudence
They've made their name at College.

They stand without a rival;
They're looked upon with awe—
These wise and reverent scholars,
The students of the Law!
"The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers."
—Shakespeare, 2 Henry VI., Act 4.
History of the Law Department of 1909.

The past is made up of the deeds of the old; the future depends upon the potentialities of the young. The simple recorder writes the deeds of the past; the true historian studies the deeds of the past and the powers of the present, and in them he seizes the future of the nations.

Our historian aspires to write the history of the Law Department, to study the potentialities of its members, and to see what a glorious part the members of this department will play in the legal profession.

On the first of October, 1908, at the sound of the nine o'clock alarm, the Tulane Law Department opened its doors and the embryonic lawyers, with determination shown in every line of their faces, filed into the class-room. From that day, like the running of the most highly developed form of machinery, the work has gone so smoothly on, that we feel justified in saying that this is one of the most successful years in the history of our Law Department.

Soon after College opened, we elected Class officers and they have discharged faithfully their duties.

Our department has taken an important part in student activities. In football, in basket-ball, in tennis, and on the track it has been well represented. One of the best quarter-backs in the South, a fast end, some good basket-ball players, a tennis star, and one of the best all-round track men in the country are members of the Law Department. In forensics it has played no mean part. Among its members are the winner of the Carnot medal, 1908; the winner of the Tulane-Texas debate in 1906; and several possible Varsity debaters this year.

A large number of the graduating class have completed the three-years course, which is unsurpassed in thoroughness and completeness by the law course offered by any other law school in our Southland, in two years, thus evincing energy and intellectual powers surpassing those of the members of all the classes that have gone before. There are some less fortunate members, however, who have taken three years to complete the course; but the high standard maintained by them proves that they will adorn the legal profession.

The merit of many members of the lower classes deserves special mention. The high grades made by many and the power of applying the law evinced by them lead us to believe that from the lower classes will come great lawyers.

Among the members of our department are graduates from the University of Virginia, from Washington and Lee, from the United States Naval Academy, from the College of the Immaculate Conception, from Springhill College, and from Tulane University.

Are we proud of the members of the Law Department of 1909? The unhesitating answer is "Yes," because the energy and bulldog tenacity displayed by the great majority of the students in pursuit of their studies, and the power of grasping readily, of analyzing, and of applying legal propositions, possessed by the great majority show that in them are great potentialities.
"Law's the wisdom of all ages,
And managed by the ablest sages."

History of the Teachers’ College.

With the industrial and economic development of the South there has come an educational awakening that has expressed itself by a demand for better schools and better teachers, and at present this demand seems almost universal. The cry everywhere is for good schools, for trained, efficient, college-bred teachers. And our own Louisiana has long felt the want of a good professional school for teachers. Responding to this demand, and with the educational welfare of the people always at heart, Tulane University conceived the plan last year of establishing a Teachers’ College as one of its offshoots in the field of education. The plan was no sooner out than it germinated, and Professors Joseph M. Gwinn and Margaret Cross were called to the newly-created chair of Education. Through the earnest efforts and unflagging zeal of these two educators, the decree of the Board of Administrators was put into effect, and the Teachers’ College arose on good foundations—a first-grade professional school for teachers, ranking academically with the Colleges of Law and Medicine.

From its very beginning it has been the aim of this new Department to afford opportunities for greater efficiency in the scholarship, professional skill, and training of teachers of both sexes. Consequently, its entrance requirements are as high as the other Colleges—viz., 15 units. By thus maintaining such a high standard, and eliminating high-school subjects from its curriculum, competition with Normal Schools is completely removed. Courses are offered that lead to certificates and degrees in education; and the College truly fulfills its mission by aiding those actively engaged in teaching and also those intending to teach in the future. The fees are not large, and numerous scholarships are offered in this and in adjoining States as well; so the new Department reaches many.

As yet, the Teachers’ College has not been endowed by any noted philanthropist, and is by necessity economically domiciled within the halls and classrooms of Gibson Hall and Newcomb, with access to the various primary schools of the city for purposes of observation and practice. But it is hoped that a separate building may be had in the near future. The ice has been broken; the College has been firmly established; further developments are only a matter of time. It is the Historian’s fond dream to gaze ahead and see the Teachers’ College of Tulane with buildings of its own, rivaling the greatness of Columbia. May it be realized!

Recently the students of the College met and perfected definite organization, electing officers, and enacting all business preliminary to taking part in all the college activities, as do other Departments of Tulane. This step was but another in the march onward to success.

The Historian cannot but think that by establishing the Teachers’ College, and thus responding to the crying need of the times, Tulane University marked an epoch in its history, for the new Department shows every indication of accomplishing great good and thereby reflecting credit and renown upon the University of which it is a part.

May the new Teachers’ College be blessed with a long and prosperous life of unmitigated success!

Fraternity.

Beyond the dreary world of every day,
  Exceeding fair and beautiful to see,
There is a realm where cares are cast away—
  A happy kingdom, called "Fraternity."
  On this we build our thoughts and fancies free,
Making our triumphs, weaving all our life
  Into a never-ending symphony.
Content, though in the midst of pain and strife;
  Reaching the goal, however far it be.
Onward we press to higher things above,
  Nobly to win through our fraternal love.
"I think, am sure, a brother's love exceeds
All the world's love in its unworldliness."

The Ballad of the Oaks.

It was in a gray old forest;
All the trees were dying slow;
No leafy bough would soon be left
To catch the evening glow.

The very air hung silent,
The silvering moss hung still,
For underneath those forest trees
Had been done a deed of ill.

That evil deed of horror
All who had seen must die;
And so the ancient lordly oaks
Prone on the ground did lie.

But, fallen low, beneath each
A little acorn lay—
Pressed by rough hands into the earth,
Cut off from light and day.

Ere long the oaks had turned to mold,
The forest changed to swamp;
Shunned by both bird and beast it was,
And called the "Dead's Dead Swamp."

But now a little shoot upreared,
A tiny hint of green,
And seven times, round as in a ring—
What could these marvels mean?

In the midst of dead this color,
Which is the line of life,
Seven shoots rose upwards to heaven,
Encircling the scene of strife.

They rose as if now through them
The dead oaks strove to give Back to the world and Nature
The joy it is to live.

Soon up to great heights climbing
They drank in the golden light;
Down into the earth, deep striking,
The Dead Swamp vanished from sight.

Until, huge-limbed, more lordly
Than ever had been of yore,
Rose seven grand oaks, strong and mighty,
With garlands of mosses hoar.

They sang with the wind; with the sunshine
Their sported; the frail ferns grew
About their roots and they sheltered them
From all but the midnight dew.

A long life they lived, full of gladness,
From a time of a far-off date,
Until from them we gathered acorns
For Newcomb, the New and Great.

The Vision.

On a sunny day I wandered
Through the grounds of dear Tulane;
Saw the busy throng of students,
Hurrying there and back again.

Saw their thoughtful, eager faces,
As they hurried to and fro.
Blessed are the knowledge-seekers,
Blessed they who thirst to know.

And there came to me a spirit
On the sighing Southern breeze,
And a magic voice did whisper
In the murmuring of the trees.

Lo! the busy scene did vanish,
And my wondering eyes did see,
On a mammoth stage enacted,
All the scenes that were to be.

There were surgeons, great commanders,
In the mighty battle—life,
Who, with skill of brain and fingers,
Fought with Death in endless strife.

Specialists in city office,
Where the suffering thousands came
To be healed, to go with praises
Of the great physicians' name.

Last there came the country doctor—
He, through rain and hail and snow,
To the poor and sick and suffering
Did not hesitate to go.

Felt repaid for days of labor
By a mother's thankful tear;
Lived his life in faithful service;
Cared not did the great world hear.

Soft the spirit-voice did whisper:
"He's the grandest of the host;
Bring the laurel wreath of Victory;
He has sacrificed the most."

Freshmen weak and trembling,
Quaking, shaking, white;
Voices all commanding
Filling them with fright.
Then initiation
In fraternal hands,
Solemn vows and pledging,
Gripping of the hands.
Freshmen proudly strutting,
Diamond pins you'll see,
Airs quite supercilious,
For they've made fraternity.

Of Inconsequence.

I.

I like to watch the curious folk
That flicker in the blaze;
They have such absent-minded
And queer, hap-hazard ways.

II.

A knight comes charging down amain—
On some enemy, perhaps;
He takes his lance for pencil now
And points out towns on maps.

III.

A wild-haired maiden in despair,
With both hands clasped on high,
Goes whisking off on a fleet giraffe,
Politely waves good-bye.

IV.

Here are David and Goliath,
But no fight is on to-day;
With Japanese umbrella spread,
Each takes his peaceful way.

V.

A horde of people come in mobs
To ask a constitution;
Now they're for playing fox and goose—
O happy revolution!

VI.

I feel superior as I sit
And watch this aimless strife,
But sometimes in the day I dream
I see such folk in life.

Good-Bye.

A little way along the path we two have walked together,
And, hand in hand, we have been glad of gray or sunny weather.

Now fair the day or foul the day,
We have no heart for knowing;
There is a word we two must say,
The very winds are blowing.

There is a word we two must say that will be bitter hearing,
For we have shut our ears against the whisper of its nearing.

Now fair the day or foul the day,
There comes this word to end it.
"Good-bye!" We laughed a little way;
We shall live long to mend it.

En masse assembled the college mind,
That awesome mixture—something of the grind,
With wit judiciously combined,
The whole by genius and fire refined;
Its work also, in brief outlined,
Is here: rare journals, not outshined
By any others of like kind
By man's invention e'er designed.
Turn then, behold, if so you are inclined.

Tulane Law Debating Club and Moot Court.

The Tulane Law Debating Club and Moot Court held its first meeting in the first week in November, and from that time has grown steadily in point of membership until it has become one of the largest and most influential literary organizations in the University.

The members have taken a keener and more lively interest in the meetings and debates than ever before, realizing that since the Club restricts itself to the consideration of legal questions only, they can derive untold advantages which can be attained in no other manner.

The Club has selected its officers from its most active members, and they have shown that their highest aim is to promote the best interests of the society.

The officers are:

- Eugene Miller: President
- Conrad Buechler: Vice-President
- Gerald Sivewright: Secretary
- Walter Parlange: Treasurer
- G. C. Dickson: Sergeant-at-Arms

The following are members: Messrs. Bisset, Bohne, Booth, Buechler, Dickson, Miller, McCall, Outlaw, Parlange, Nix, Garland, Bierhorst, Edrington, Schneidau, Sivewright, Theard, and Estopinal.

Tulane Oratorical and Debating Council.

Until very recently the management of all debating at Tulane was vested in the Faculty, but during the session of 1907-08 an advance was made. Chiefly through the efforts of Mr. H. W. Kaiser, the Tulane Oratorical and Debating Council was organized. This Council, which consists of representatives from the various literary societies of the University and from the Alumni Association, does a large part of the management of debates.

Through the efforts of the Council, the Tulane Forensic Club was formed last year. The membership in this Club consists of all past presidents of literary societies, all old 'Varsity debaters, and the members of the Council. The officers of the Club are: Mr. Ralph Shwarz, President; Mr. H. W. Kaiser, Vice-President; Mr. Chas. E. Dunbar, Secretary.

The Club has many sub-committees working on various matters connected with debating. Thus, the management of the debates at Tulane now rests on a sound basis, and students, alumni, and Faculty all have their share of the work.
All our strength we show you in
Teams of power and of fame,
Hard to hold and sure to win,
Loyal to their college name.
Eagerly we sing their praises.
Tell of their sincerity,
In these pictures and these phrases;
Celebrate each victory,
Symbol of our 'Varsity.
"Oh, it is excellent
To have a giant's strength!"

The Newcomb Athletic Association was founded in 1909. The motive for forming such an organization was given by the great necessity that has been felt for a long time for a central Association that would supervise and control all the Athletics at Newcomb. Under the auspices of the N. A. A. was organized the Newcomb Tennis Club and the Newcomb Track Team, and a Rowing Club is now under consideration. The success so far of the Association is indicated by the amount of enthusiasm and interest manifested in Athletics this year as well as by the regularity and system with which the various departments of Athletics are run. Basket-ball, for instance, is much improved, owing to the round-robin system of games that has been introduced. Also the plan of having the managers of the various departments of Athletics come from the Alumnae is an admirable one, and has proved signally successful. The under-graduates have not the time that is necessary to be given to the management of the respective departments. The formation of the N. A. A. was an epoch-making event in the life of Newcomb.

The Newcomb Athletic Association is very significant of the new life that has manifested itself at Newcomb; of the broadening of work along all lines and along Athletics in particular; of the concentration of energies; of the recognition of the value of organization. The N. A. A. has had its birth. Long live the N. A. A.!

The Student Club was founded in 1909. It is the natural outcome of a desire of the students to have a meeting-place. The Student Club, however, has a much greater significance than any mere meeting-place could have, and its establishment at Newcomb means that we are working a step nearer to that democratic ideal which all colleges so valiantly hold up. In the complicated college life there is a natural tendency to the submerging of the individual, and it is an unfortunate fact that there is a survival of only a very few. This tendency, especially the last year or so at Newcomb, has been accentuated. It is just a few girls who run things and the mass of students are unknown, as well as unacquainted. Now the duty of the college is to bring out such girls—girls who are wanting not in real fineness, but perhaps in aggressiveness. The Student Club can be a very vital factor in pushing this movement forward. The Student Club is the place where all students meet on equal footing, where the spirit of good-fellowship is predominant, and where the "timid" may meet the "great" and make themselves known.

Aside from these idealistic phases, the Student Club room has many practical purposes. It is a delightful rendezvous during study hours, and a more cheerful place for meetings of all kinds—literary and "non-literary"—can hardly be imagined. It is the scene of the students' jollifications and parties and receptions, and for that reason, if for no other, ought to be one of the happiest in every student dent's memoirs.

Three years have passed since the Class of 1909 entered the college world as innocent Freshmen; three years since we first set sail for the Port of Knowledge. From that memorable day we have plodded steadily forth, indomitably by the stony heights of themes and essays or the geometrical floods of spheroids and polyhedrons. With eagerness and zest we have absorbed the "char-ach-teristics", and the "pe-culiari-ties" of foreign language, and the "rice" and "amelioration" of the lecture system has become, as it were, a very part of our daily thoughts.

Red ink, which adorned our Freshman quiz papers with such profusion, has disappeared entirely from the expressions of human agony, and the heroic chemical sign of suffering has changed long since into a constant "Merry Widow" smile of approbation.

Our scientific power has been proved conclusively, for under our Stern investigation the great dormant germ of the Newcomb Glee Club was brought to light—a queer biological specimen, possessing eighty feet, a varying pitch from a high squeak to a low sonorous groan, and a remarkable affinity for fifty-cent pieces.

Along with this instinct for discovery runs our great talent and love of music. Indeed, so imbued are we with this passion that the sweet tolling of the Chapel bell causes our trembling souls to vibrate with emotion and renders us unable to attend the services. This, and this alone, is the cause of the enormous numerals which adorn the "absence" line of our Chapel cards. Our hearts are too deeply stirred; if our presence is desired, ring not the Chapel bell. For our passion for music reaches even unto the music of the spheres, and, in spite of the terrors of a Lyon and the fearful rotation of the earth, we have faithfully fulfilled our motto, "To the Stars through Difficulties."

Again, the comprehensive faculty of our intellect has been shown through our actions, for, after careful study and diligent application, we have mastered all rules governing the use of that sacred and awe-inspiring instrument, the cage telephone. This acquisition alone will place us in the ranks of the immortals.

To speak of our travels would mean to enter into a long discourse upon geological subjects; but let us mention that our "sheep" were landed successfully in the countries of Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior, and that all our hours of vacation have been spent out West with Mr. Dixon. All you who hear this last remark will realize that no further testimonial is needed to our patience and power of endurance.

Tender flowers that we are—raised in the hot-house of a steam-heated building—our drooping spirits crave the refreshment of shower-baths, but alas! the grim Faculty have been deaf to our entreaties and have not harkened to our pleasing voices. However, we are noble, and, though we have suffered, we will forgive—but we will not forget.

And now at last the triangular paths of Junior knowledge have been utterly trodden down by us, and our minds have developed to such an enormous degree that we are considered able to embrace the fathomless depths of endless Dixonian philosophy. Our voyage has neared an end, and the haven is in full view; the haven for which we have steered with ceaseless energy, the good for which we have striven with failing strength; and we bid farewell to the days of frivolity, the days of mirth and careless laughter, and stand ready to undertake the responsibilities incumbent upon Seniors. So to-day, as the Cap and Gown are bestowed on us as the symbols of Seniorhood, we, the Class of 1909, receive them with hope and faith, and pledge in turn honor and loyalty to our Alma Mater.

Once upon a morning dreary
As I slept—still weak and weary
From the Latin quiz Miss Harkness
Flunked me in the day before—
Suddenly I heard a clanging,
As of tin cans loudly banging;
"'Tis our dear Miss Shields," I thought,
"A-calling someone on our floor."
Back to sleep I went a-snoring;
Dreamt I was o'er Latin poring,
Studying and still more cramming,
Till I could imbibe no more.
Louder came the clanging, clinging;
"'T is the rising-bell that's ringing,
Waking me by its persistent clamor
At my chamber door."
This I said—and nothing more.

Author's Note: Ask all Dormitory girls.

To Miss Stubbs.

There was a girl across the hall
And she was such a bore
That every time she left our room
We had to lock the door.

It was real late; she made a call,
But still we burned our light—
"Just a minute and that's all,"
But, alas! she spent the night.

She's in our room before we wake,
Before we go to bed;
Until I and my room-mate
Sometimes wish we were dead

"A story in which native humor reigns
Is often useful, always entertains."
Freshie Green's First Days at College.

One mornin' in last September Pa came in an' tole the folks he had decided to send me to college. He'd been out feedin' the horses an' I 'd jes' come back from milkin'. We all sat down to breakfast, an' finally Pa said, "Well, Ma, I'm goin' to send that boy to college." 'Course I thought Pa 'd want me to go to one er them "uniform an' brass button" places, an' I was in a hurry to know where I was goin'. He said, "I know where you think I 'm goin' to send you, Bud, but no tin-soldier business is any good in college. You 'll go to Tulane." I 'd heard erbout Tulane from some fellers when we was out campin' on the bayou, an' had seen that sport from Tulane who used to come up here to see Aunt Minervy Jones' gal, Sal. Sallie shorely is a good-lookin' gal, an' the fellers 'round here didn't stand no chance 'gainst that feller. He shorely was a sport; he dressed somethin' swell, an' had a real gold watch-chain. Well, I thought I 'd like Tulane all right, an' maybe I might get to be a real lady-killer—like that feller Menee.

'Bout a week afterwards I went down an' got on the train. Nearly everybody 'round erbout was there to see me off, 'cause you know Pa's sheriff an' a big man in our Parish. Sallie was down there an' said her folks was goin' to send her off to school, too, but she didn't know just where. When she tole me good-bye I tried to kiss her, but she jumped, an' all I got was her chin on my nose. Well, I got on the train an' waived to everybody, an' then she started to goin' real fast an' I didn't have a chance to wave to the fellers in the swimmin'-hole as we went by. In a little while we passed out-er the Parish, an' I decided to look 'round some. Ma had fixed me up a real nice basket er grub an' had some doughnuts an' a bottle er buttermilk in it. I came to the doughnuts first thing, an' they shore was good.

I saw a nice-lookin' feller 'cross from me lookin' real hard at me eatin', so I says to him, "Don't you want some?" He said, "'No, thanks; I 've breakfasted;" but he come on over an' started talkin'. He asked me where I was goin', an' said he was on his way to New Orleans to go to Tulane, too. He said he was from Lumberton, an' I didn't know where that was. Pa 'd tole me to keep my mouth shut an' I wouldn't let out how little I knew, so I didn't ask him where it was. I asked him would it be "his first year at Tulane, an' he said, "'No; I 'd be a Junior if it wasn't for my conditions." I didn't see how his health could keep him from bein' a Junior, 'cause he looked real well. Well, looks are deceivin' sometimes. Pretty soon he pulled out a little flat gold box an' took out a cigarette an' asked me to have one. I took it for per litheness, an' it was a new kind. It had some sort er brown stuff pasted 'round one end an' I thought that was the end to light. He saw me an' kinder grinned; then he said, "Don't light that end; that 's the cork tip." I tole him we didn't smoke nothin' like that at home, an' he said, "Oh! you 'll learn; that 's a Turkish cigarette." I saw him lookin' in my basket, which was open, an' finally he said, "Got a baby travelin' with you?" I tole him "No," an' he said, "What 's the milk for?" I tole him it was buttermilk Ma had fixed up fer me, an' he laughed. I wonder why, 'cause I didn't see no joke.
In a little while he said it wouldn't be a bad idea to go through the train and see if we couldn't find some more of the fellers. He met a whole bunch, an' talked a little while before introducin' me to them. I heard one er them say, "You can see that by his looks, easy." One feller didn't catch my name an' asked it over. When I said "Green" he said, "That's a cinch." They were all mighty nice to me, an' inquired specially erbout the folks on the farm, an' wanted to know if there was any more like me. I tole them I was Ma's only son, an' one er them wanted to know if I was raised on buttermilk.

The next station was a place called "Bogalusa," an' one feller got on there. Everybody yelled, "Hello, Jimmy!" an' he came on up an' joined the crowd. He looked real fierce, but the fellers said that he was part tame from bein' at Tulane. We had a nice time till we got to New Orleans, an' then I tole the fellers I'd have to hunt up Pa's lawyer an' get my money, 'cause he was 'fraid to trust me on such a long journey with so much money.

Pa's lawyer was mighty nice to me, an' I stayed at his house that night. The next mornin' I went up to the College to do my registratin', an' I found the feller they all called "Jimmy" sittin' on the front steps talkin' to a feller with his pants rolled nearly up to his waist. He said he was a Junior, too; an' it looks sorter like everythin' here is a Junior. The feller with his pants rolled up tole me I'd have ter go in an' see a feller named "Dickey," an' he showed me where to go. There was already a whole lot er people in there, an' I had to stan' in one corner an' wait my turn. Lots of fellers came in an' went ahead of me; I didn't think that was polite, but they done it all the same.

Finally, Mr. Dickie motioned to me, an' I showed him my hay-seed high-school diploma. He took it an' looked in a book an' said, "You'll have to see the Dean." I asked him what that was, an' he tole me to go down the hall an' into the last room. He sorter smiled, but I s'pose he was tryin' to look pleasant. I finally found the Dean, an' he tole me I'd have to enter with a condition. I didn't know what that was, but I s'posed it was all right if he said so, 'cause he seemed to know everythin' an' a little bit more. He sent me back to Mr. Dickie with a slip er paper, an' I had ter give him 'most all er my money fer a little receipt an' somethin' he called a "matriculatin' card." They shorely do use big words 'round this place.

After that went inter the hall an' saw a bunch er fellers all talkin' at once. One of them, a big tall feller, 'most twelve feet tall, give me a "library ticket." It was mighty nice of him, 'cause another feller tried to sell me one fer five dollars. The big tall feller was named "Lanky John." Nearly all of them asked how crops was doin' an' erbout the folks on the farm. I wonder how they knew I lived on a farm.

Finally, I got settled down pretty well an' got fixed in my room in the Dormitory. Fellers would open the door, look in, an' then go out grinnin' after sayin' they thought I was somebody else. There wasn't many up there that night, 'cause they all went out somewhere. The next mornin' I took my matriculatin' card an' had to go round an' get the Perfessers to sign it. Some er them didn't look much like Perfessers. One feller looked real young an' lady-like; some er the fellers said his name was Perfesser Harold, an' I'd have him in the shop. I didn't see how, 'cause I didn't have a shop, unless they meant my room. Then I went to see a little man that 's goin' to teach me French. The boys called him "Pete," an' he was a real nice lookin' little feller. He signed my card, an' tole me there was goin' to be a Faculty meetin' an' I couldn't see the other Perfessers until later.

I went on down stairs, an' jest as I got down two fellers grabbed me an' said, "Here's another! Let's get him, fellers!" I said, "You fellers are mistaken;
I’m a Freshman.” One er’em said, “Oh! we thought you were President Craighead!” But they wouldn’t let me go. They were two Sophomores, an’ they carried me out on a place they called the “Campus.” I saw a lot er’fellers gathered ’round some fellers with their coats turned inside out an’ their pants rolled up higher ’n that Junior’s.

When we got over to the bunch they began yelling “Speech!” an’ after turnin’ my coat inside out they put me up on top of a thing they called a “sundial.” I didn’t know what to say, so I told them how pleased I was to meet them all an’ how good-lookin’ I thought they was. Then they asked me to pledge not to help my Class fight. That Junior with his pants rolled up so high was near an’ he said, “Don’t do it, Freshie; don’t be so yeller.” I tol’em “No,” an’ they tied me with ropes. Jest then somebody yelled “Freshmen!” an’ I saw a bunch er’fellers without any coats or hats on runnin’ up.

Then the Sophomores closed in with ‘em, an’ they all began to tussle. A big feller asked me if I was a Freshman an’ then took his knife an’ cut me aloose, an’ said, “Go, help your Class!” I went an’ jumped on one er’ the fellers who had caught me when I was comin’ down the stairs. I got him down, but somebody tied me, an’ I couldn’t do nothin’ but hold the feller that had me.

Finally they got us all down an’ tied us; then they made us pledge to go with them till twelve o’clock. They turned our coats inside out an’ took us to Newcomb. Newcomb is a big girls’ college an’ they say it’s the biggest an’ best in the South. When we got there they made us go up on a little sort of gallery an’ stan’ on the bannister rails. Then they tol’me to sing a song, an’ I sung “Home, Home Ain’t Nothin’ Like This.” I happened to look up at a winder, an’ who do you reckon I saw? I’ll be gol-durned if it wasn’t Sallie Jones up there! Her folks had sent her down that mornin’. She waved to me, an’ just then somebody upstairs threwed a pitcher er water on me. I didn’t care, ’cause I knew Sallie was here, an’ I guess I’ll be glad to be at Tulane after all.

Well, after that the Sophomores took us down town an’ marched us all around; then they let us go, an’ I came on back to the Dormitory. I went to the telephone an’ rung up Newcomb an’ asked to speak to Miss Sallie Jones; she came to the ‘phone an’ tol’me I could come to see her at eight o’clock Friday night. She didn’t know she was comin’ to Newcomb until after I’d left, an’ she come the next day. Day after to-morrow will be Friday, an’ I wish that gol-durned clock would tick three times as fast as it does.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

I went to see Sally last night an’ met some er’ her friends. I like Tulane fine. Say, they made a mistake about Newcomb; it ain’t the best girls’ college in the South; it’s the best in the world, an’ Sallie Jones is the nicest girl in Newcomb College.

Oft Have I Been.

Oft have I been where the teacher with frown
Would say that my marks were of late going down;
The rules, truth to tell, seemed I to neglect,
And how on my character this did reflect.
But ne'er since the time when in school I first entered
To this day, when my interest in college is centered,
Had I ever been told, in truth or in jest,
While struggling to recite a rule at behest,
That the way that I did it (while staring in awe)
Could be accounted for only by the total depravity law.

E'en guilty of an atrocity are you, my friend,
When a word mispronounced to your seat may you send.
Then at you, the victim of cruellest fate.
When your reason has left you and closed fast the gate,
A volume of words, which you could not mistake
For any peace missize, is aimed, and you cry,
If only all Latin was up in the sky,
And lessons no longer were sources of trouble,
But would fly off together and burst like a bubble,
Then life you'd enjoy and you'd find it worth living.
For while Latin endures there is nothing peace-giving.

A Luckless Lover.

I broke it off with Anna Long—
She was too short, you see;
With Mabel Wright things all went wrong,
We never could agree;
Then there was awkward Mary Blue,
Who was so very green;
And Bessie Goode would never do,
Because she was so mean.

It couldn't last with Jennie Read,
Because she wouldn't write;
And after just one day I freed
Myself from Nellie Knight;
I soon concluded that Miss Crewe,
Must seek another mate;
I gave up Edith Early, too,
Because she came down late.

Miss Wood possessed an iron will;
Miss Gay was always sad;
Miss Sharp could see the point, but still
She said my jokes were bad;
Miss Rich was destitute of "tin";
Too melting was Miss Frost;
In earnest, then, I wooed Miss Winn,
And same old luck—I lost!

Three Letters.

NEWCOMB, January 5, 1909.

Dear Nan:

This letter is being written to you from the depths of the bluest blues I've had in an age. Now please, please don't throw it aside just because I've said that. I'll promise not to make it any "dismaler" than I can help. Please let me talk to you for a while.

It's very warm and breezy down here just now, and perhaps that's what makes me feel so out of kilter. The idea of such weather in January! No place but "dear quaint old New Orleans" would think of having it. I can't study, I can't listen when anyone lectures, and, worst of all, I can't seem to care however gaily my marks go flying to the four winds.

Now don't be facetious and tell me that I'm in love. In the first place, facetiousness is not becoming to your style of nose, Nan; and, in the second, I'd run a block to keep from meeting the only interesting-looking boy I've seen since the holidays. So there you are.

Perhaps I'll tell you about the boy. Would you be very good if I did? Cross your heart? All right, then, Lady; here goes. I couldn't tell it to you by word of mouth. I'm too ashamed.

In the beginning the Seniors were to blame, and in the end—well, wait until we get to the end and you'll see. One day not long ago the Seniors decided to give a reception. It was to be a great affair—music, refreshments, and boys from Tulane, besides the usual reception crowd. They gave it in the Students' Club Room, of course, and, to show their sister feeling, asked a lot of our girls to serve. Unsophisticated infants that we were, we accepted joyfully.

At three or thereabouts we began our labors, bravely attired in virgin white with a bunch of Senior colors on one shoulder. At first the crowd wasn't bad. We scattered cups of chocolate and Nabisco wafers right and left and saw our way clear to getting the cups and saucers back, but, as the afternoon passed, more people, still more, and then some, arrived. And, queer as it may seem, nobody left.

I was priding myself with the ease and gracefulness with which I threaded the crowd, while I rested from my labors. I didn't rest long, though. The girl pouring chocolate caught my eye and beckoned to me.

"There's a bunch of boys just coming in," she said, dropping large gobs of whipped cream into the cups; "for mercy's sake, give them something to eat, or we'll never hear the end of it." And before I knew what I was about, she had loaded me with the cups and I was off.
Let us be brief. I reached them safe enough, handed over one cup with a gracious smile, and with equal graciousness emptied the other over the outstretched hands of a second youth. To this day I can't tell whether he, the cup, or I slipped. Something happened, that's all I know, and I faded swiftly from the scene.

And, oh, Nan, he was so nice-looking! I can't write you any more; my feelings are too worked up.

Answer this soon, that's a dear.

Stella.

Newcomb, February 25, 1909.

Dear Nan:

Your letter has only just gotten to me, but I am answering on the instant, though you don't deserve it. I have something so funny to tell you. You remember in my last letter I told you the sweet, sad story of the nice-looking boy and the cup of chocolate? (That sounds like the title of a Sherlock Holmes story, doesn't it?) Well, here's the next installment.

Last Saturday I went up to spend the day with one of the girls. She's a dear fluffy sort of a girl, and, incidentally, she has (as I discovered later) a rather attractive brother. No, Miss Detective, he isn't the nice-looking boy.

After luncheon Ruth and I sat on the rug before the library fire and naturally fell to telling each other the stories of our lives, and out came the one of the good-looking boy, et cetera. And when I had finished, "I know," said Ruth, as calmly as you please; "he's Fred's chum," "Fred" being the brother. Well, Nan, you could have knocked me over with a feather. There were a thousand and one questions I had to ask Ruth, but she had suddenly disappeared, and when she came back with a huge bowl of pop-corn and instructions to eat it while it was hot, my attention was slightly diverted. But I remembered soon and fairly pelted her with inquiries concerning the interesting youth.

"Oh! I'll tell you," laughed Ruth, and prepared to do so, while I leaned forward, clasping the pop-corn dish affectionately.

"His name is Dick Matton," she began. "Here—put that dish on the table before you break it in your excitement." I scrambled up and started toward the table. There were steps in the hall, and Ruth gave a fair imitation of an Indian war-whoop.

"Dick!" she cried. At the name I spun around to the door (this time it was the rug that slipped), and the half-dishful of pop-corn went flying in the face of the nice-looking boy! I fled through the other door and escaped in spite of Ruth. I wonder what I'll spill on him next time! Will there be a "next time"?

Stella.

Newcomb, April 16, 1909.

Dearest Nan:

You said you were so interested in my serial of the good-looking boy, that I'm sending you a thrilling chapter. (Incidentally, he's a ZAE.)
Last Friday was the night of the Langton's German. It was a great affair, given at the Refectory, invitations engraved, and all that, you know. Well, I went, and, Nan, I did look nice! Honest I did. I wrote you about the pink satin I was having made? It's a thing of beauty, and I felt that it was my Christian duty to be becoming to it. So I was.

I went with the boy I told you was so beautiful. He is, to be strictly truthful, too beautiful for a boy, but oh, how he can dance! Moreover he fills a girl's card for her in no time. By supper-time I was rather worn out, so that it was awfully nice to drop into a chair in a nice dark corner and send my partner for an ice.

I leaned back and closed my eyes for just a minute, but I really think I must have been almost asleep, for when someone said "Miss Broughton" right close to me, I sat up with a start.

A tall dark somebody in evening dress was standing in front of me, and he looked very familiar, though I couldn't see his face.

"Did I startle you?" he said. "I'm sorry, but I've been wanting to speak to you for some time, and this is my first chance. I'm afraid you don't recognize me."

"I'm afraid I don't," I murmured stupidly, and waited.

"My name is Matton," he said, "Dick Matton; you—" I jumped as if I had been shot and became possessed of a wild desire to run. I couldn't think of that boy, much less face him, without having visions of rivers of chocolate and showers of pop-corn.

"Then I can't—talk—to you!" I gasped, without half an idea of what I was saying. "I beg your pardon; I'm awfully sorry about the chocolate and pop-corn—"

"I'm not," he laughed.

"But I've got to go; I've got this dance."

"Please wait," he begged. "This isn't a dance, you know; it's supper-time, and I've been trying to deliver a message to you for the past month or so."

"A message?" I said; "you have a message for me—from whom?"

"From somebody back home," he said, "who was possessed with the idea that we might be friends. I've been trying to meet you at the reception—"

"Don't, please don't," I begged.

"—at the Crome's, and now here. Don't go away; I don't bite, and if it will make you feel better I'll get you something to throw at me."

"That's mean!" I cried. "Every time I see you, you make me disgrace myself. Why, I can't know you! I'd go around spilling and breaking things in a disgraceful way. I don't think—I want to risk it."

"I have the best references," he insisted. "Stay a little while, at any rate, and let me try to persuade you."

He didn't seem to realize (though you never can tell about boys) that he had a most persuasive voice. I didn't feel like going back into the lime-light, and so—I stayed.
Yes, of course, I was persuaded. He has a very nice profile, he knows interesting people and knows that he knows them, and—well, you know I like to study unusual people. It will help me so when I try to write.

Did I tell you that I was wearing a ΣΑΕ pin?
Write to me soon, that's a dear.

One More Class.

Let me tell you, gentle reader,
Of the beings in our Class:
Butts, you know, would be a leader
As an anti-glacial ass.

Carrico comes next in order:
He was born in our own day;
You may tell him by the odor
Given by the seed of hay.

He was sure precipitated
From a broken-down hot spring;
Why he ever was created
Is a question for a king.

Then there's Winn, a stalagmitic
Specimen of orthoclase;
He appears quite stalactitic
With his paradoxic ways.

Then there are the lordly Seniors.
Seiler, Scott, and Williams, they;
Each a boss of all creation,
With his wise and clever way.

There is one I have not mentioned.
Not because I think he'll flunk,
But because whene'er you see him,
That damned fellow Myers's drunk.

I should speak of our Professor—
There is plenty I could say—
But I think that I had better
Let another write his lay.

There has been formed at Tulane a new Carnival organization, the Krewe of Ananias. It is affiliated with the organization of the U.S., of which Theodore Roosevelt is the great I'mit. The purpose of this organization is to foster and further the noble art of circumlocution and to assist in all immoral investigations. There are already many worthy members in both Faculty and student body. The following is a list of the members:

A Dream on Completing the Reading Required During the Sophomore Class.

At last it was done, and I threw down the last book with a sigh of relief and closed my eyes to shut out the dancing letters. Hearing a slight noise, I opened them almost immediately, and was rather startled to find that I was standing in the midst of a large green field with not the slightest sign of a book anywhere. After a few seconds of bewilderment, I perceived that there was a town in the distance and also that coming toward me was a little girl with long, thick hair hanging about her shoulders, and who walked with a cane.

"Are not you the Dolls' Dress-maker?" I asked, when she came near.
"Of course I am," she retorted. "Why are you here, anyway?"
"That is exactly what I do not know," I answered meekly; "nor where I am, either."
"Well, follow me and you will soon learn," she remarked, condescendingly.
Not knowing what else to do, I went.
It was the queerest old town I have ever seen. Some of the houses were built in the style of hundreds and hundreds of years ago, others in that of the present day; turreted castles stood close beside tenement-houses; and the strangest kind of people walked along the streets.

"What a cheerful-looking man! Who is he?" I asked, as we approached a little man sitting on a doorstep.
"Just wait and guess by the answer he makes to the question I shall ask,"
"What are you doing here?" she asked, as we came up.
"Nothing, my dear; only waiting for something to turn up," he answered, smiling cheerfully.
"Isn't he stupid?" she said, as we passed on; "some people call him 'a darling,' but I don't!"

Presently we came in sight of a large crowd of men and women.
"Julius Caesar and Fergus Maclvor fighting again," she replied to my questioning look.
As we neared the outskirts of the crowd, who should come up but Mr. Bollin, of "Bollin's Bower."
"Have thee read 'The Decline and Fall of the Rooshan Empire?'" he asked me, so suddenly that it made me jump.
"I don't remember ever having done so," I answered.
"Well, when you do, make a note on," said Captain Cuttle, who was with him.
"I think I will make some notes now if you will lend me a pencil," I said, turning to Richard Cœur de Lion, who was standing near.
"'Neither a borrower nor a lender be!' he thundered, leaning on his mighty battle-axe.
"'Barkis is willin'," volunteered a little man, holding out a pencil as stumbled as he was.
I took it, but, strange to relate, it had changed into a book, and, with the transformation, both the town and the people vanished, leaving me sitting in my chair and wondering.

C. J.
Shades.

The shades of Caesar, Cicero, and Vergil stood out on the Arcade and looked disconsolately at each other. Vergil broke the silence: "Edipol!" quothe (which is a Latin "swear-word"); "they told us there would be girls here, and behold, there are none." At that very moment a bell rang; immediately the Arcade swarmed with girls. The shades cast one look at each other and then ingloriously fled—only to jump from the frying-pan into the fire, for they landed in the Gym, where a class was just finishing a game of basket-ball. It was the last straw. A moment later the shades stood on the street corner wiping their foreheads (if one may be pardoned the anachronism) with their silk handkerchiefs.

At last Caesar said: "Well, that was a narrow escape, but let us not despair. I have heard that in this Newcomb College there dwells a teacher who instructs her classes in the pure Latin pronunciation. Let us go and see her. We forgot, when we fled, that none can see us." The others assented; and, after going to der Herr Professor's room by mistake, they finally came through the key-hole into the Latin room.

The Freshman Class had just entered and the members thereof were exchanging despairing remarks concerning the insurmountable difficulty of the lesson and the total idiocy of Mr. Jones. During this period the teacher indulged in a little preliminary glaring, of which the beglered pupil attempted to be ignorant, but failed hopelessly. Then the Class was ordered to close its books, and the lesson began.

First, some brilliant mind raised a discussion as to the quantity of some vowel in some word, and there was a mad consultation of Latin dictionaries. This matter settled, the lesson went peaceably enough for a few moments, then some unfortunate put the accent on the second syllable of infero instead of the first. The question was passed without a word of explanation. The teacher made a ferocious face, and the Class looked helplessly at each other; the shades looked at each other, too; they hadn't expected to see such cruelty.

Again there was a brief peace, followed by a prolonged spell of flunking on the part of the Class. The teacher made a short address on the stupidity of Freshmen in general and of the Latin division in particular. Again the shades stirred uneasily. Some "atrocities" in the line of pronunciation was then spoken by a struggling girl, and the teacher remarked that, loath was she as to believe it, nothing but the doctrine of total depravity could account for the Freshman mispronunciation of Latin. The Class, as in duty bound, laughed at this witticism, but the mirth was rather hollow. Someone recited a rule. "Miss Blank," remarked the teacher, "there is not a word of truth in what you have said. Please learn to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Has any young lady on the back row anything to say? On any of the other rows? Take the next sentence, Miss Jones." Miss Jones arranged the words in her sentence with strict regard to the English order, and was immediately squelched. "Does anyone know this rule of order?" inquired the teacher. The Genius on the front row waved a solitary hand, and recited the rule as if there were plenty more where that came from. The Class looked as if they wanted to pinch her.
It would be monotonous to recount more details. The girls flunked, the teacher glared, and the Genius recited rule after rule. At the close of the hour the Freshman Major Latin Division was cordially invited to study its next day's lesson, as half of them weren't making a passing grade, and would end by being transferred to the Minor Class, which was not composed of stupid. "Excused!"
The Class walked out with very audible sighs of relief; so did the shades.

That night in "the house-boat on the Styx," Horace and Livy were called in and Cicero, with his usual eloquence, told of the day's adventures. At the close of his account, Horace rose and moved that something be done to prevent such cruelties being daily committed under the guise of teaching pure Latin. His motion was duly seconded, and Livy and Cicero were appointed a committee to visit the earth and destroy all the Latin text-books of every description in existence, and, above all things, to make Elisha Jones, A.M., sorry he was ever born.

Sing a song of Freshmen,
Hearts so full of fear;
Eight and fifty Freshmen
Came to school this year.

When the college opened,
The Sophs began to say:
"With so many Freshmen,
We'll have sport to-day."

"Wait!" the Freshmen answered,
As to the roof they flew;
And in the morning early
The breeze their banner blew.

The Sophomores all were startled;
Around the place they ran,
And on the Newcomb campus
A tug-of-war began.

The banner was between them,
It was both red and white;
The Sophomores all pulled strongly
But the Freshmen held too tight.

Sing a song of Freshmen,
Hearts so brave and true;
Eight and fifty Freshmen,
Here's a toast to you!

After all the delegates had found places as far away as possible from the girls with whom they were not on speaking terms, the President called the meeting to order—the deed was accomplished after using a megaphone three times—and the Secretary called the roll. There were only five total absences, the rest being represented by some good-natured friends. The improvement in this line was favorably commented upon by the member of the Faculty.

The discussion was opened by the Chairman of the Rushing Committee submitting the rule: "No Fraternity girl shall approach a Freshman on any subject whatsoever until she has reached the rank of Sophomore."

The delegate from F. R. A. objected on the grounds that the alliteration of "reached the rank" spoiled the sound of the rule and made it seem foolish. She was answered promptly by the delegate from T. E. R., who maintained that the alliteration gave the rule force and certainly added beauty. There was long and hot discussion by the meeting in general, which was finally ended by the President appointing the delegate from F. R. A. and the delegate from T. E. R. as a committee to discover the true significance of "alliteration."

The delegate from N. A. D. next objected, because she said in going to and from classes she had to "approach" Freshmen—in fact, pass very near them.

The delegate from F. D. G. maintained that by its very derivation the word "approach" did not mean that, but meant "get into a discussion with" or "get the opinion of." Everybody present had four or five opinions on this subject, and all expressed them. Finally order was restored by the President appointing the delegate from N. A. L. and the delegate from F. D. G. as a committee to find out all they could about the word "approach."

After vigorous attempts to get the floor, the delegate from H. T. remarked that the rule said that "no Fraternity girl could approach a Freshman," and asked that if she got two or three Freshmen together, could she do anything she pleased with them? This question was treated with some levity at first, but on closer inspection was found to be very serious and required much discussion. A committee was appointed to discover just how broadly the term "a Freshman" could be used.

At this point the Secretary remarked that her minute-book was full, and, as the business that was going on was too important to put on a piece of paper, she asked that the meeting be adjourned until another day. There was a unanimous motion to adjourn, which each member promptly acted on without waiting for the second.

The Faculty Treated by Their Own Formulas.

(A Prize for Identification.)

He's tall, he's lank, he's wondrous thin,
And yet, if you were prone to criticise,
You'd find for exits and for comings-in,
For motives and for wit to satirize,
The classic unity this man defies.

And one there is who, you may see,
On tangents loves to make you fly,
And some day, for she aims so high,
She'll drive you to infinity.

From monkeys it is proved she has evolved,
Except she's more developed protoplast;
Yet see her once and, first to last,
All this grand theory will be dissolved.

Erudite in Anglo-Saxon,
Profound in composition,
Of gestures quick and birdlike,
Of a charming disposition,
She thinks an extra essay
But a trifling affair;
The poor, unhappy juniors think—
Well, their moanings fill the air.

Who is this that is speaking of meter,
What the probable number of feet are?
Who talks of Euripides,
Converses of Sophocles,
And requires the Greek tongue to greet her?

Who was the kindest man at college?
Who did teach us French and knowledge,
Entre-deux?
He was the joy of all our class;
Yes, we liked him, every lass;
Though we did not learn a mass,
'Still 'un peu.'
Types.

He thinks he's some spell in his D'Aulnois' clothes; but I'll give you a tip, and say that the only spell things he owns are his toes and the article under his hat.

It's hard to tell how this fellow has done. He's a puzzle in all of his classics. For he imports himself when he says, 'With a bon' and he celebrates all of his passes. He'll say 'a bird' when he wants on a 'bat. This is logical. I will admit. But any in the world will he then tell you that he always 'goes out' to get hit.

His mother calls him sugar, and his father calls him cake. He should have gone to Newcomb, but he got here by mistake.

You will call him a green one sickly and slim. You will say he's as soon as a hearse. But I say him stout erabs and the green about him was all folded up in his purse.

An athletic Freshie in gym
Often climbed up the ladder with vim.
Her blouse flew about,
Her bloomers stuck out,
She looked as if ready to swim.

If you heard the exclamation,
"Ah! Young ladies!"
In a tragic intonation,
With an eyebrow elevation,
And "Alas!"
Your heart would melt with pity
At her horror of this witty
Junior Class.

TO MRS. ANDERSON.

When the Junior Class were polyps and crabs,
In a paleozoic age;
When we had no quiz how the rhinoids riz,
On a Bergen Davis page;
When we lived like the protozoa bugs
Where the simple Algae delves,
Our days were rife
With joy of life,
For we couldn't make slides of ourselves.

In name he's something fierce and loud,
In manner quite the opposite;
To Math and Physics he's avowed;
Of learning he's a composite.
Of stars he teaches to the stars
Of Nineteen Nine (oh, mission high!),
The folk, the plants, the fish of Mars,
The flora, fauna of the sky.

Arms always forward bended
To receive the Junior Class;
Head to the right is turned
To greet us as we pass.
Though we always have a conflict
When it's time to go to gym,
The lady there is waiting
To handle us with vim.

There is a professor called Wespy,
Of temper exceedingly testy;
When reminded in class
Of his youth as long past,
He waxes most frequently jesty.

In Deutschland ich bin gewesen,
In history also with Mason;
When talking with Beziat
I'm often very flat,
I know not the "raison d'être."

SEÑOR FERNANDEZ.

When 1909 was a Freshman class,
In a far-away distant time;
When we learned to speel in polite Castile,
Then we said "Cuentan" every day
Till as Sophomores we met.
And we said then
For a year again,
And we're saying "Cuentan" yet.

Does all in her power,

Among the funniest memories
That hang 'round Newcomb Hall,
The one concerning Dixon
Is the funniest of all.
The students were quietly sitting,
To one of the lectures listening,
When Dixon walked across the hall,
And then, alas! pride had its fall.
For though it's a sad thing to be spoken,
The chair he sought, why, it was broken.
Then, woe to relate, the speaker and students before,
Dr. Dixon was brought with a crash to the floor.

Jokes.

FRESHMAN: "Mrs. Hudson has some fresh cider."
SENIOR: "Is it hard?"
FRESHMAN: "No; it's a liquid."

French Class began as a comedy; it bids fair to end as a tragedy. "Oui," and "Nons" were said on principle to every question asked. Result: There was "a hot time in the old college" when the exams set in.

MISS ROMAN: "O young ladies! This noise must stop!"
A SENIOR: "Miss Roman, were you like the Hymans at school?"

SENIOR FERNANDEZ: "Es no importa, señoritas, whether you come to class or not."

If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, the Tulane Gym had been a thing of the past and the new Newcomb had been already built.

A JUNIOR (in Chemistry): "Miss Hero, what shall I do? I looked at the liquid and it crystallized!"

SENIOR FERNANDEZ: "Be sure to bring your dictionaries to examination; there might be a word that you don't know the meaning of."

MISS HARKNESS (as student hesitates in reading): "Well, go on."
STUDENT: "I don't know how to pronounce 'sop.'"

MISS HERO (impatiently): "There is no use doing that experiment if you don't recognize the point when you see it."

 Have the Seniors given the Committee on Entertainment due and proper notice and received permission to Commence? We're sorry for them if they haven't.

BRILLIANT TRANSLATIONS IN THE LATIN CLASS.

MISS A. L. A. V. H.: "And then he raised his hands three times, one by one."
MISS R. C. A.: "As a mark of further bravery, they even removed their dead bodies from the field in undecided battles."
MISS N. V. S.: "These people, indeed, tied hair on the head itself, therefore making a dreadful knot."

A CHEMISTRY EXAMINATION.

QUESTION: "Why are acids optimistic and bases pessimistic?"

THE ANSWER Miss Hero expected: "Acids are optimistic because they look through rose-colored (litmus) glasses, while bases are pessimistic because they make all (litmus) things look blue."

THE OFFICE.

A place of (1) early hours [3 o'clock, as many a poor German student knows to her sorrow ]; (2) well-guarded locker-keys; (3) great frugality, regularity, and exactness of information; (4), much discretion especially over the 'phone."
What may be considered an indiscreet use of a 'phone, we'd like to know?

There was a young lady named Wallace, Who, with artful and cunningest malice, Talked books to Miss Stone Till the hour was done, And the Class gave a cheer for Miss Wallace.
Them Two Black Eyes.

(With apologies to James Whitcomb Riley.)

On't they was a little Freshman wouldn't learn a rule;
Miss'd her Jimmies Prose when she went to school.
The Juniors heerd her holler and the Sophomores heerd her bawl,
An' when they op'ned the Latin door she wasn't there at all!
They secked her in the office, an' history room, an' press,
An' secked her in the Latin room, an' ev'ry otheres, I guess;
But all they ever found was thist her rat all tossed out,
An' tracks as if small angry pegs had stamped all 'round about;
A coral bead lay on the floor—the victor's spoil, no doubt;
An' them two Black Eyes'll git you,
Ej
You
Don't
Watch
Out!

An' one time a little girl 'ud allus laugh an' play,
An' make fun of all the class, though she missed heaps worse 'n they:
An' on't she missed a question when "Dickie Bird" was there,
An' then, instead of feelin' sorry, she said she didn't care;
An' thist as she called the President "an awful silly quy;"
They was two big Black Beads a-starin' in her eye,
An' they bored her through an' through 'fore she knowed what she's about!
An' them two Black Eyes'll git you,
Ej
You
Don't
Watch
Out!

So when the rules is awful hard an' you're feelin' dreadful blue,
An' them two Eyes blaze an' sputter till they scare you through an' through,
An' you feel you want to quit an' the world is cold an' gray,
An' recess in the distance looms so awful far away,
You'd better mind your Greenough's an' your teacher fond an' dear,
An' cherish her as loves you (though that fact ain't always clear),
An' learn your Jones's Prose, an' your rules know all about,
Or them two Black Eyes'll git you,
Ej
You
Don't
Watch
Out!
La Belle Dame Sans Merci.

(With apologies to John Keats.)

Oh, what can ail thee, Freshman sad,
   Alone and so pale wandering?
All have departed from the school;
   No more bells ring.

She taught me quantities not sweet,
   And maddening rules, exceptions too,
And oft in language plain she said,
   ‘Your rule is wrong, it is not true.’

Oh, what can ail thee, Freshman sad,
   So frightened, weeping as you stray?
Why are you not with the other girls?
   On the campus your team does play.

And there at last she flunked me. Yes,
   And there she spoke—ah, heaven forfend!
She practically called me an ‘it’—
   I could not e’en my course defend.

I see a book within thy hand,
   With anguish moist and fever dew,
And on thy cheeks a fading rose
   Fast withereth too.

She kept me there within her room,
   And there she fussed and fussed like sin,
And there I flunked and flunked and flunked
   And still she did but grin.

And there I slept, and in my dream
   I saw pale Sophs and Seniors too;
They cried, ‘La Belle Dame sans Merci
   Oh, she has hold of you!’

I met a laddy in yon room,
   Full plain to see a scholar’s child;
Her frown was stern, her smile was stern,
   And her eyes were wild.

And there I slept, and in my dream
   I saw their terror as I slept,
And many a warning true I ween;
   Then I awoke and found me here—
Ah me! my flunk is not a dream.

She said I spoke full much not true.

And this is why on the Arcade
   I wander lonely, morn and night.
To-morrow’s the condition exam;
   Oh, pray ye all I pass aright!”
The Junior's Appeal in Behalf of Her Sister Freshman.

(With apologies to George P. Morris.)

Molly, spare that Fresh!
I hear her plaintive woe!
In youth you went for me,
And I'll protect her now.
Though 'twas her father's hand
That cast her in this lot,
There're some things I won't stand—
Thine eye shall blast her not!

That keen, incisive speech
That hasn't its match in town,
That never spared poor me,
Oh! shall it back her down?
Molly, forbear thy stroke,
Be merciful as wise,
And spare those infant folk,
Whose wails now pierce the skies.

Thy bite is even worse,
Worse than thy bark, old friend;
Lest I encounter it,
I'll bring this to an end.
Harm not these infants brave,
O Molly, leave the spot;
While I've a hand to save,
Thine eye shall blast them not!

The Compleint to Her Purse.

(Several apologies to Chaucer.)

To you, my purse, and to non other wight,*
Compleyne I, for ye be my guiding-star.
I am so sorry now that ye be light,
For certes only ye can lead me far,
Me would as leef be swallowed by a gar;
Imploring now your mercy and your sous,
Beth hevy ageyn, so I may pay my dues!

Now voucheth sauf this day to furnish me
A dollar for the Newcomb N. A. A.
My dues for Class and for Fraternity,
For Student Club, and for "Le Cercle Français":
Oh, sure my life, poor empty purse, I pray!
Quene of comfort or creator of the "blues,"
Beth hevy ageyn, so I may pay my dues!

Now purse that can to me be friend or foe,
For Latin Club and Glee Club I am sure
Dramatic dues and Evens, too I owe!
Oh, come across, sweet purse, I thee implore,
With all my dues and please a little more!
But then, a beggar certes cannot choose.
Beth hevy ageyn, so I may pay my dues.

They told us of the great, grand thing,
"A Simplified Schedule,"
Where everything would have its time,
And all be run by rule.
I've thought it out with greatest care,
And goodness gracious me!
If what we have is "Simplified,"
What would a "Complex" be?

Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage;
These seem as mansions in the sky,
Or some quiet hermitage,
To those who’ve been in Latin class
And heard the last bell ring,
And known that in a minute more
They’d feel the Harkness sting.
Mrs. Grundy’s Answers.

(With apologies to the Ladies’ Home Journal.)

Dear Madam,—Would you be so kind as to tell me whether men are wearing the hair long or short this season? I prefer it long, but am greatly perplexed.

Anxiously,

Pierce.

Answer.—If you wear it too long it will appear bobbed, which style is fast losing favor.

Dear Mrs. G.,—Being a young Professor, I am anxious to ascertain the styles of this here town. Also, do you consider red ties tasty and becoming to chatains with gray eyes?

Answer.—If you will send me a stamped envelope, I will send you the address of an excellent tailor.

Dear Mrs. G.,—In regard to the number of buttons that a young woman should wear on her dress, do you think 102 are too many?

Anne.

Answer.—Decidedly, 102 are “de trop.”

My dear Madam,—Is it courteous to tell a class of young ladies that they are much inferior to boys in their practical knowledge of Physics—although this fact is obvious?

Sincerely,

Jack Adair.

Dear Madam,—If one is annoyed by tacks and small rubbish in one’s food, would it be very discourteous to make this fact known to the Matron?

A Dormitory Girl.

My dear Madam,—When one has repeatedly “called down” a young college woman and then she rises and deliberately lowers the adjusted window three-fourths of an inch, what should a teacher do to preserve her injured dignity?

Yours,

Molly.

Answer.—In an outrageous case of this kind, I would advise you to get an axe.

My dear Woman,—If a starving student dares to interrupt me simply to ‘phone for her lunchon, should I coldly dismiss her or lay myself open to impudence by reprimanding her loudly?

C.

Answer.—By all means have some nourishment at hand to allay the starvation before you proceed to take any other steps.

Dear Mrs. G.,—I have procured twenty-five shirts of the same pattern, and it causes much excitement among the young ladies. What is the matter? Perhaps you can tell me.

Andre.

Answer.—Maybe they think you are trying to economize on your laundry bill. You never can tell.
The Higher Education.

This girl got out of her classes at two,
But meetings kept her till five;
That night she had all her lessons to do—
By twelve she had one of them done half through;
Quoth she, "I'll get up at five,
Do some of this Latin, and then I might
Get through with my essay in time for a bite
Of breakfast to keep me alive."

To college and meetings her whole life she gave,
And she did her work fairly well;
But, an A.B., 'tis said
She went out of her head,
And now lives locked up in a cell,
And loudly, triumphantly, long shrieks she:
"'Rah! 'Rah! Now at last I have got my degree!"

A fool there was who wanted a book,
   Even as you and I;
She paid four bits and her receipt she took,
She thought she was done, but she was mistook;
   Not so you and I.

Taxes were levied—a dime or two—
   Even on you and I;
Quarters some odd, and dollars a few.
To be sure, the cover design was new,
   Broke poor you and I.

But the fool held on to the bitter end;
   I, we warned her—you and I—
But daily her purse apart she 'd rend
And wildly to father for money she 'd send,
   Even as you and I.

Dispensing in his blame, so I’ve been told;
Two different courses has he taught us well;
Led us on crusades or to Chaucer’s “well”;
Each time we’ve been, his sense of humor great
Round every rock has shown a by-path straight.

Mind of weight and hair of gold,
Are you trying hard to scold?
See the Juniors, how they grin!
Oh! now let some talking in;
Oh! one thinks it’s such a sin.

So here we have the wisest and the best;
The one to whom we listen with no word
Of interruption. Her “dates” we learn and say.
No true “significance” escapes her mind;
Endeavor to “rehash,” but do it right.

When in all this world of trouble
Ere will there be his double?
Since talking’s his forte,
Perhaps in the court (?)
Yet the play-practice just makes more trouble.

"Es no importa, señoritas, whether you come to class or not."  Three tardinesses count an absence.

In general, an Even may be readily distinguished from an Odd by a certain bumptiousness of carriage in the former; the Odds maintaining a meditative serenity. This may seem odd, but it is even so.

Who Said?

"It 's different on the outside."—W. H. P. C.
"O Doctor Smith, I am so glad to see you! I little thought this morning there would be such showers of blessings."—J. C. R.
"Why do you grease the tail of a dog?"—H. A. R.
"Of course, you gentlemen are not expected to know this; but I will ask it, just to see if you know it."—R. S.
"No, you've too much work already."—W. M.
"You gentlemen see what I am driving at."—M. A. A.
"There is a fly on the wire, so I will have to shake the wire."—S. J. B.
"I don't give a rap if the whole bunch go to the bow-wows."—W. H. P. C.
"As I have told you before, French and Spanish are as good mind-trainers for Engineers as Mathematics."—A. F.
"This is a very difficult problem. No wonder no one got it—simple arithmetic."—J. N. I.
"Whitman might be considered a poet—perhaps, ultimately."—W. P. B.
"This atmospheric is not good for the preservation of woods."—S. C.
"Every one of you leave the library."—Miss B.
"I can see in the near future that Harvard will be proud to refer to herself as the TULANE of the East."—A. B. D.
"At Cornell, this machine would long ago have been relegated to a museum of antiquities."—W. B. G.
"Let's rub it out, and start all over."—J. R.
"You're a fine bunch of gazaboes! Consider White!!!"—W. H. P. C.
"If you know all we have taken up this term in class and in the text, you shouldn't worry about the examination."—D. A.
"And so we have it."—B. P. C.
"I'll just pull you off the platform."—W. H. P. C.
"You know I'm pretty easy."—O. M. J.
"It is evident, gentlemen, that I have something to learn about this subject. I'll work it up by next lecture."—W. B. G.
(We should like to put down something for Dr. Craighead, but he never says anything.)
"Yes—that's right—beg pardon?"—E. A. B.
"We won't discuss this any more.—This is an unfortunate example—Eh?—What?—Why not?"—D. O. M.
"The books have it that way."—D. G. S.

[After due consideration (of White) the following was spontaneously composed by the Senior Class.]

Although not bright,
If you stick tight,
And do work right,
And don't sleep at night,
You'll be like White.

We all know White;
He worked all night
In dim lamp-light
To do things right;
End of all—

CONSIDER WHITE.
A Newcomb Girl's Soliloquy.

(With an apology to Shakespeare and Bacon.)

To flunk or not to flunk—that is the question.
Whether 'tis nobler in class-rooms to suffer
The stings and malice of outraged teachers,
Or to take arms against a sea of zeros,
And by "diggity" end them. To flunk in everything,
What worse?—And by a zip to know we end
Bad recitations and the other natural shocks
The college girl is heir to. Is this a consummation
Deemed to be wished? To get bad marks in everything—
Bad marks, perchance conditions. Ay, there's the rub!
For with conditions 'fore us, what exams may come,
When we had thought that we were finished,
Must give us pause. There's our neglect
Which makes calamity of so many school-days.
For who would
Bear the "hic-hoe-hoe" of Latin,
The numerous questions, the smart girl's knowing air,
The pangs which quites cause us, our own lack of knowledge,
The sarcastic laughter, and the pitying looks
That harassed 'fessors on ignorant girls bestow,
If we ourselves might our quiets make
Without exams? Who would ever bother
To work and cram during the weary terms?
But that the dread of something after "E."
Those fierce exams, from whose effects
But few recover, changes our will,
And makes us rather study now
Than wait and grind hereafter.
Thus the future doth make cowards of us all,
And thus the natural cry of "Never study"
is faintly heard through the days of the year,
While engagements for the week-nights yet to come
On this account regretfully are broken
And lose us many pleasures.

M. J. S., '12.

Breathes there a maid long past nineteen
Who never but one man has seen,
Who lives a life which is serene,
And never sighs for what might have been?
The Deserted Assembly Hall.

(With apologies to Oliver Goldsmith.)

Dear large Hall, best-known play-room of the school,
Where oft we go to study or to fool!
How many times I've seen your benches filled
With students boisterous and by nothing stilled!
At other times your lofty walls have rung
When on your stage some class play has begun.
The Glee Club tried your spacious bounds to burst
By gathering those who did for music thirst.
From missionaries, kindergartens, too,
Your walls have heard of things both strange and new.
But now I enter and I look around,
And stop and wonder, for I hear a sound
Just as of many people whispering low,
With laughs and quiet quick to come and go.
Such murmuring it seems there could not be
From people less than ninety-nine and three.
How is it then that all whom I see here
Are two small Freshmen giggling just for fear,
While near them sit, in some deep subject rapt,
Three Sophomores in argument entrapped;
Four Juniors, loudly laughing, seem to think
The world is theirs, for them to paint it pink;
The front row is adorned with Seniors grave—
The number six, the countenances brave?
"I gazed and gazed, and still the wonder grew,"
Till, turning to the platform—then I knew.
For there sat Mr. Dixon with a joke
Just coming forth some misery to invoke;
While by him sat, with pleasant smile adorned,
A man with papers numerous and prolonged.
The riddle solved came to me quick and true:
"This must be Wednesday and Assembly, too!"

NEW ORLEANS.

EDWIN BOONE CRAIGHEAD, LL.D., D.C.L., President.

The University, in all its departments, is located in the City of New Orleans, the metropolis of the South. There are nine Departments, with twenty-three buildings. Modern dormitories, extensive laboratories, libraries, and museums.

THE ACADEMIC COLLEGES, comprising the College of Arts and Sciences and College of Technology, offers full courses in Literature, Science, Architecture, and all branches of Engineering. Many scholarships in the Academic Colleges are open to high school graduates.

THE NEWCOMB COLLEGE for Young Women, located in Washington Avenue, in the best residential district, offers full courses in Literature, Science, and Art.

THE ART DEPARTMENT of the Newcomb College offers every facility for the study and practice of industrial and fine arts, with picture galleries and an art library.

THE TEACHERS’ COLLEGE offers both practical and theoretical training for superintendents and principals and teachers of high and elementary schools, with course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts in Education.

THE GRADUATE DEPARTMENT, open to graduates of approved colleges, offers advance courses leading to degrees of A.M., M.E., C.E., and Ph.D. A number of Fellowships are awarded annually.

THE LAW DEPARTMENT offers a three-years course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws and prepares students for admission to the bar not only of this State, but in any of the Common Law States.

THE PHARMACY DEPARTMENT offers scientific training in Pharmacy, Drug and Food Analysis, with superior laboratory facilities.

THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT (Undergraduate), the oldest medical college in the Southwest, offers unequalled clinical and anatomical advantages. The Hutchinson Memorial and the great Charity Hospital are open to the students of this department.

THE POST-GRADUATE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT (New Orleans Polyclinic), open to licensed practitioners, affords unusual clinical facilities for the study of diseases. Instruction is carried on at the Polyclinic, at the Charity Hospital, and at the Eye, Ear, Nose, and Throat Hospital.

For special circulars or for detailed information, address the Deans of the respective departments. For General Register of the University, address,

How to select a piano

The piano you select will be your companion for years. If it possesses a tone that will soon wear thin, it will become tiresome. The only guarantee of permanent satisfaction is to buy a Steinway.
