Whose Spirit was Ever as Young and as Enthusiastic as Newcomb's Successive Classes
The Official Organ of the Students and the Alumni of Tulane University, is the well known "Jambalaya". The Editorial Board presents the 1910 issue, with confidence. All who scan its pages, will detect that each contributor has zealously tried to maintain or excel the high standard of previous years. We rejoice that happy memories will be revived, and new interest aroused, when read by former Students; no less will be the satisfaction of the loyal band of Collegians now enrolled at Tulane University, for each has played well his part, the whole being the "Jambalaya" itself.

"The Moving Finger writes: and, having writ, Moves on: nor all your Piety nor Wit Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line, Nor all your Tears wash out a Word of it."

The Dancers.

Comrades, there is no end to sun and laughter!
Night comes, but in the dawn it is forgot.
Adown the way Life calls, we follow after:
So sweet what is — who weeps for what is not?
The day is all too short for lovers' knowing,
Who break the rose, yet sigh to miss it growing.

You's light! We would be blind with noonday splendor.
And deaf with silver cadences of song.
We would be dumb with stress of speech, too tender
For broken words, and far too deep for long.
We would live out our life in crowded spaces
Lest we recall, too late, forgotten faces.

We dare not rest, Comrades, lest we remember—
At night we dare not dream lest we forget.
The flame dies not within the ashen ember
Tho' with slow tears and hot, it has been wet!
Comrades, our feet are weary! they tread flowers
Above the graves we made in kindlier hours.

The central ideal of an Academic Course is the promotion of pure learning, besides aiming to give the undergraduate a broad and liberal culture, splendid mental discipline and useful knowledge. All this is greatly facilitated by specialized study and research; then follows naturally, the diffusion of this knowledge among the people.

Competent and well trained men are supplied for the noble professions and public service. Graduates are turned out for the work of producing and distributing wealth. The Academic Department of any great University tends to elevate the level of culture in a Democracy. It is broadly practical in qualifying students to respond wisely and effectively to all the great relationships of life, by fitting them to perform their individual, social, and civic duties, and to take their part in the life of the nation, the family, the church and the state; not to follow blindly, but to lead intelligently is the true ambition of the Academic.

Not only does the free and intentive spirit become characteristic of the academic Department but it stands in the midst of the most advanced ideas of civilization and can be depended upon to furnish some of the most important contributions to the study and advancement of all social, economic and ethical problems. The mental and moral atmosphere is made healthful and a strong honest manhood, promoted. All the influences surrounding the work tend to create citizens in harmony with the National idea, broad minded and loyal to public welfare. Men prepared for general activity are sent into the world to influence the nation, men who can express themselves by tongue or pen with clearness and accuracy, and finally men who have a store of knowledge which humanity in its progress has acquired, ready both for present and future use.
DR. WALTER MILLER, A. M.
Dean of the Academic Colleges and Professor of Classical Philology.
Academic Senior Class History.

FRIENDS, fellow-students, countrymen, lend us your attention. We come not to praise ourselves, but to bid you adieu.

Our four years of life here have been most pleasant and encouraging to us. In fact, in afterlife, when seated before the fire-place, thinking of our past careers, what pleasant recollection will come up when once some one says, or we may think of, the word “Tulane!” Then will the spirit of loyalty, pride, and enthusiasm enter upon our consciousness.

We will then think of the days when, as timid and self-conscious Freshmen, we first entered Tulane with the intention of obtaining for ourselves a goodly portion of that precious and invaluable food called Knowledge. After submitting to the warm and busy reception accorded us by our elder brethren, was it not a happy day for us when we bathed them twice in that tug-of-war contest? Or when we showed them that we were their equals in a class football game? Or even their superiors in a class track meet?

A change, and behold! We are Sophomores. Proud as Punch over this, we began the class cap fad, which is still in style. Was it not a glorious time when we wiped out the Freshmen in a class football game? Or when we kept them away from the tank, thereby leaving our colors up there for a second time? Noticing the freshness of our infantile brethren, did we not for their guidance and welfare, promulgate the famous “Twenty-three Edicts?” To show you how prominent our men were, one became the assistant manager to the foot-ball team, and two others respectively, became captain, and manager to the track team.

A third year begins, and behold the change! We became Juniors, abandoning the play-room to the infants and their nurses, and attend to the wants of the college. We showed what kind of men were in our class when one of us became President of the Forum Literary Society, and another Speaker of the Glendy-Burke. Was it not a great addition to old 1910’s glory, when two of our men represented Tulane in the memorable debates against Virginia and North Carolina? Or when another one of our men won the Carnot Medal? In athletics, we furnished the base-ball team with a captain, also a manager. We furnished managers to both the foot-ball and track teams.

This year of glory and encouragement rolls by, and we enter upon the various activities of our last year. A 1910 man is Editor-in-Chief of the Tulane Weekly. 1910 men hold the positions of foot-ball team manager, and track team captain. At present, we, owing to the fraternal spirit existing among us, have formed a permanent and lasting organization of our class. Nor will we forget our Alma Mater, for we shall leave to her, a token of our lasting loyalty and devotion. We have always remained loyal to her, and we shall always do so. Our only regret is that so short a time exists before we must depart. The time slowly, but surely approaching, when we, with all the honors due us, must bid you “Farewell.”

Tulane Junior Class History

We have endured the trials and tribulations incident upon the verdancy of Freshmen, and we have enjoyed to the fullest extent the proverbial domin-ance and haughtiness of the Soph. But much of that effervescence of spirit that was to have stimulated our youthful hands to heroic deeds has found no least points of resistance, and has bubbled away. Those aspirations that characterized our thoughts when college presented to us a life of novel pleasures have passed away with the disappearance of that novelty, and we are content to realize as Juniors that there is much we must learn before we pose as preceptors, and much that we must do for ourselves, before we are enabled to serve others.

The class of 1911 entering college under adverse circumstances, has lost many of its members, who were unable to oppose the impediments strewn in their path and have fallen by the way. However, despite the fewness of our numbers, we have much for which we might feel proud. It may be true that we have not developed a remarkable degree of "class spirit." but it has been conveyed to our minds that a broader "college spirit" is more serviceable to our University, than the indulgence in petty class interests.

For that reason our class has an unusual number of men active in Tulane affairs. With respect to athletics we have supplied several 'Varsity stars in football and several representatives for the 'Varsity in track; also a number of the Board of Trustees of the T. A. A. Our class football team was recognized as the champion of the college. In fact in proportion to the number of our classmen, those who have entered for athletic sports are quite a few. They form a large coterie of football, basketball and track men in the college.

In a literary way and in forensic endeavors, our men are also most active. Our class is represented on the Weekly by three men, one of whom is the Managing Editor. We have supplied a President for the Forum and a President and Secretary for the Glendy-Burke. Our classmen are always active in intersociety and interclass debating, and several are candidates for the 'Varsity team.

In the various language circles, also, the members of the class of 1911 are leaders. One of our men is President of the Circle Francaise, and another Secretary of the Deutsche Verein. In fact, all the factors in Tulane life have drawn largely from our class, and we are well represented in all positions where effort is being made to increase the prestige and influence of our Alma Mater. Continuing in our stage of progress, we shall surely have accomplished something in the interest of Tulane before we leave its portals as graduates.

TULANE SOPHS
History of the Class of 1912.

As it has been the custom of previous years for the Sophomore Class to relate the many glories which it has achieved in all departments of the "game", it now behooves us to submit the following lines of "We dids."

We did twice win the Tug-of-war.
We did twice win the individual wrestling matches.
We did last year act unlike sons of Southern gentlemen and painted the tank, while the Sophomores who considered themselves gentlemen didn't interfere.
We did have excuses for losing the Freshman-Sophomore debate.
We did flunk.
We did respond first and foremost to the coach, when he appealed for more "scrubs."
We did go to sleep in Billy's room.
We did show the Freshmen the straight and narrow path (to Newcomb.)
We did teach the same party the use of cold water and green paint.
We did have a successful?? football season.
We did allow the Freshman class picture to be taken, Oh! yes.
We did have representation on the Tulane Track team.
We did have the Sacred Five.
We did and still have the admiration of our Professors.
We did receive invitations for Four o'clock teas.
We did go to Del Corral's but now we attend chapel.
Last of all we did what every Sophomore class cares to do, that is, we made the Freshies respect us.

All hail to the illustrious class of 1912, the classiest of all classes.

FRESHMEN
Academic Freshman Class History.

In recalling the events which have occurred during the "infancy" of the class of the "unlucky digits", one finds that its members seem to have borne in mind the philosophy of Cicero: "Quicquid agas agere pro viribus." Surely the "right reverend" class of nineteen twelve has realized this.

It is certainly unnecessary to relate the "cordial" welcome of this class into college. Too many manuscripts have relieved the historian of that task. Suffice it to say that the officers of the class had been elected before the first day of its college life was over, and that in their selection the class did not act as "green" as the Sophomores had deemed it.

One finds little wonder that the Freshmen became superstitious after being defeated both in the individual wrestling matches and in the Tug of War, although their indignant opponents emerged from the latter game as undignified as themselves.

"The inaudible and noiseless foot of time" stole onward. The members of the class joined "frats", societies, in fact everything pertaining to college life. The English professor, especially, can tell how fluently they learned to use such terms as "flunk", "grind" "exam" etc. The class held meetings, chose colors, formed teams, decided to wear a uniform cap, composed a yell and yelled it.

As a famous playwright has said, "No profit grows where is no pleasure ta'en." Therefore the newcomers having received a challenge to a football game from the Sophomores, they accepted it. At the end of the contest superstition had fled from the Freshmen.

Data about this infant class of the olive and blue would cover pages; but it might effect the equilibrium of some of its upperclassmen. Let us hope that as Sophomores the class of thirteen will continue in success and then it will attain the ideal which the poet so aptly expressed in, "Terminet imperium oceano et famam astris."

To one returning to Newcomb after even a short absence, there are many changes, some fundamental and others of minor importance yet all tending toward the attainment of the ideals which those interested in the welfare of the college have cherished since its founding in 1886. Within the past few years new buildings have been acquired, new departments added, and efficient professors secured for the maintenance of these. To 1910 belongs the achievement of a School of Music and a department of Domestic Science. While the college has increased the number of its interests it has also strengthened those already existing. The Academic Department has raised the entrance requirements and increased the courses of study. The Art Department is widely known not only for its excellence as a school of pottery and design, but as the art center of a city noted for its culture.

This advance of the standard of the college has been maintained not only by the institution itself but by the student body. While student self-government does not exist, student self-regulation is found to be desirable and helpful; all questions of honor and loyalty are referred to the students for adjustment. The field of college activities has broadened and now includes, besides the various branches of athletics, the publication of a magazine, the support of several language clubs, a glee club, and a literary and debating society which last proposes to inaugurate a series of debates between the large colleges for women.

But all that has gone before may be regarded in the light of preliminaries to a greater change—the strengthening of the flower before transplanting for, with the passing of a brief time, Newcomb will leave the home of its infancy and take its place among the lofty buildings and stately gardens suited to a college of its rank and achievement.

Newcomb Senior Class History.

THE EVOLUTION OF 1910.

The time has now gone by when an enlightened historian would dare to treat any series of events in the old Static way, relating facts, facts, facts, but seeing no connection at all. In view, therefore, of the advanced state of historical study at Newcomb, the only acceptable method of giving the history of 1910 is in accordance with the principles of the Dynamic school, that is, to trace every event back to the prophecy of its beginning and to carry it forward to the reflection of the last shadow it casts upon the earth. One can readily see that in so short a sketch as the present one, it is impossible to follow out this method fully, so I will only indicate the line of thought, trusting that you will work out the details for yourselves.

The history of the class of 1910 of Newcomb College may be divided into three periods. (1) All the time from the beginning of the world to 1906. (2) 1906—10. (3) 1910.

You will see by this division not only the great principle of the Continuity of History, but also how small a part of its real history is embraced in the short period 1910 spends in the college itself, and how very absurd it is to consider it ended with 1910.

Of course none of the College Period can be understood until we have thoroughly mastered not only the general history of the time covered, but all the personal biographies of all the members of 1910 as well.

With this as a basis, a study of the artistic tendencies of the class from childhood will explain why Newcomb won so many medals in art during the years 1906—10. Then, tracing the development of scientific interest we can understand the brilliant work done by that class in Astronomy. (See speech of Professor of Astronomy on "The Work of 1910.") As for Language, this wonderful class broke the record in Latin more than once, and as a result, the entrance requirements were raised the very next year. (See catalog 1907-8). This same method of study may be followed in the case of History, Athletics and other departments with equally remarkable results.

Though 1910 counts as one of its achievements the inauguration of a formal opening ceremony for the College, which it hopes will become one of the permanent features of the college year, (consult College Records) still just as the talent of 1906 took the direction of innovation and novelty, so the genius of 1910 seems rather to be that of organization, system and reform. Hence we find this class devoting its energies, not only to the establishment of self-government, but to the consolidation, remodeling or suppression of many of the clubs, together with the adoption of a joint system for office holding and club membership. After this period of retrenchment and reform, 1910 bent nobly to its task of successfully carrying on student activities.

Now as the class is about to close its college career, can we not say, that, in view of its past, we may expect an even more glorious Alumnae Period than all its past history can boast?

The Pendant.

What is this gem that one and all admire
That lies enclosed in a case of gold?
What is this jewel large that doth inspire
The awe and reverence of young and old?

It is a golden chain of endless length
Whose value's great, its beauty unsurpassed,
It is a chain in which there's might and strength
Enduring force and power that aye will last.

And ev'ry link conceals a mystic spell
Whose potency is strange and great and rare,
And though you'll wonder, ev'ry link can tell
A tale that's woven in its heart with care.

The Pendant is a bit of purest gold
Its shape is like a flower pure and fair
And all the tiny petals lightly hold
Small stones whose tinge is odd: 'tis olive rare.

And if the gems are counted one by one
'Twill soon be found that in the flower small
There're eight and twenty. Has the gem begun
To tell its real significance to all?

The flower is simple but its bright and gay,
A graceful flower, the golden daffodil,
Now what do gold and olive green betray
This flower, too, this golden daffodil?

The case of gold is Newcomb brave and strong
Enduring, valiant, staunch, without a fear
And all the links that grace the necklace long
Are emblems of the classes of each year.

The olive colored gems that deck the flower
Are tokens of so many maidens bright
Who honor Newcomb—Seniors—hour by hour
They travel onward in the paths of Right.

The pendant with its many gems of worth
Is emblem of the class of 1910,
Fair Newcomb's prize...There is no class on earth
More lauded by the voice of mortal men.

I.

Ye Juniors and Seniors of old Newcomb,
How can ye be so glad and gay?

How can ye sing, ye Glee Club girls,
And I in such a sorry way?

Ye'll break my heart, ye happy girls
Who laugh the whole day through;

Ye mind me of the far-off days
When I was one of you.

II.

Oft did I rave on the Arcade
To read the notices with glee;

And gladly told I of my fun
It seemed that none could happier be.

With lightsome heart, my locker door
I oped — with not a thought of fear.

A note lay there — need I say more
Of warnings and conditions drear?
History of the Class of 1911.

There is an old saying that quality is better than quantity and this is most certainly shown in the class of 1911. Though small in numbers this class is great in the qualities which go to make up a strictly energetic and earnest body. Early in its infancy 1911 proved that it had great ability in giving class parties. It has given to the college world the most unique examples of class entertainments even eclipsing 1909 by giving a class circus for the benefit of the "naughty niners." Not less original was the party given to the dear little Freshmen this year in which 1911 brought "Pilgrim’s Progress" to earth, and showed the children how to carry burdens and how to drop them.

In college affairs 1911 has always taken an active interest, and through petition has obtained for the students a daily newspaper which can now be found in the college library. Not enough can be said of what 1911 is going to do in the year to come, for there are plans on foot, which in their materialization will astonish the whole atmosphere.

In the eyes of the faculty 1911 is a wonder, a perfect Utopian class. No one can deny it for 1911 stands for this:—

(1) History note-books well kept and full.
(2) French lectures well attended and understood.
(3) Chemistry knowledge ironical and otherwise.
(4) Never more than three absent at Latin class.
(5) English essays always in on time.
(6) Gym. class always fully and willingly attended.

In other words 1911 lives in its motto, "Fama semper vivat."
The Call of the Cap and Gown.

In the days when we struggled with letters
With "the ball" that "the boy" had "found;"
Through the many long years intervening
Came the Call of the Cap and Gown.

So we followed it in through our studies
With courage now great, now small,
And sometimes another voice charmed us
And we turned aside from the call.

So with feet that were not always willing,
And with hopes that would sometimes fall,
We have almost reached the Caller
And we soon may answer the Call.

May none of us turn from the Calling
To listen to some other sound
But may we all hear in its beauty,
The Call of the Cap and Gown.

Newcomb Sophomore Class History.

To chronicle the achievements of the wonderful and far-famed class of 1912 would require the pen of a Homer or a Shakespeare; a mere mortal, even though he be a Sophomore, cannot hope to do it successfully. So we warn all who read this brief history that it does not give the class of 1912 one half of the honor and glory that is its due; for—well, "he who runs may read."

1912 entered Newcomb with so unusual a noise that even the hardened faculty awoke from their peaceful slumbers long enough to prophecy that here was a class which was destined not to pass into the dim back-ground of "the things that were," in short, a class "not born to die." And truly have we fulfilled this prophecy. Freshmen, you know, have a habit, peculiar to themselves, of flunking in Math. But—wonder of wonders!—not more than half of the class was conditioned. German, English, and French Professors spoke of us with genuine feeling. And as for Latin—out of modesty we will not speak of the record we made there; others can do it better than we. In all our classes, in athletics, in debating, in everything, we went in to win and if we lost—as we sometimes did—we gave our opponents something to beat.

This year we have done even more. We have borne the odors of Chemistry lab., and the little storms that sometimes cross its sky have left us undisturbed. We haven't left Physics more than once a week—ever. With "unfailing cheerfulness" we have taken our "roastings" in Latin, and were "vastly amused and entertained, too!" and—O ye Gods!—the essays we have written and the essays we will write. And we live to tell the tale.

It might be well to remark here that the "unfailing cheerfulness mentioned above is one of our principal characteristics. "Let us eat, drink and be merry," is our motto.

But to speak seriously for a moment, looking back over the year we can see many opportunities neglected, many dark hours, many class-room tragedies as well as comedies. But, on the whole, the year has brought us much. Our only regret at its close is that our college life is passing so swiftly away. When the dignity of Senior-hood is ours, the years of preparation will seem very short, and while we are living them, we, as all who know us can testify, are obeying the injunction of our arch enemy, "carpe diem."

Elizabeth M. McFetridge.
As Others See Us.

A stranger came visiting Newcomb one day;
As he wandered around and gazed,
The girls that he saw were so happy and gay
That he seemed quite truly amazed.

"Oh who are those mat'rens in study immersed?
Of his guide he astonished inquired.
"Those are Sophomores bright, who for knowledge do thirst;
They with noble ambition are fired."

Further on a hilarious group he perceived
Singing with voices quite clear,
And the beautiful notes were the best, he believed,
Which had ever delighted his ear.

"Those are members of Glee Club," he soon was informed,
"As you doubtless can easily guess,
With great ardor for music each one is armed,
And much talent they all do possess."

On the campus, the stranger proceeding, soon saw
A basket-ball game hot and swift;
The passes and "baskets" filled him with awe,
Of the fouls he could not catch the drift.

"Which ones are the winners?" he asked in delight,
As he tried to balance the scores;
Everyone cried in answer from left and from right
"Why of course they are Sophomores!"

"Well so far as I see, the good man then said
"The other classes are nowhere,
And the Sophomores stand out far ahead,—
Such girls are remarkably rare."

The President told him, "You show your knowledge,
In this you are certainly right;
I really don't know what I'd do in this college
Without the class of the Red and White."

Newcomb Freshman Class History.

Freshman—"Fun? Of course, for us — but not for the Sophomores. I don't know exactly how they felt, but oh! their looks when they emerged from that scrimmage on the roof! Just listen to the implements of warfare — three hat-pins, one pen point, finger nails (number?) one pair of scissors and any other "sticky" articles that were found lying around. How much of a heroine each one of us felt though, with our hair streaming mildly, our clothes torn and parted in all directions, oh, well! precisely as all books say we ought to have looked. I am sure. But what did we care for our looks when in orange and black 1913 floated proudly over us, over the very site of the skirmish then strewn with hair-pins, belt buckles, ribbons, combs, and all belongings which had been detached gently or otherwise from ourselves."

Friend—"An excellent victory, but—"

Freshman—"Well, we never refer to that memorable day in October any more — please notice our generosity—. Since the last sounds of our cheering, perhaps shrieking would be better, died away as we raised our flag to the breeze, no more has been said of the matter. Moreover, it ill becomes the Freshmen to mention their achievements you know!"

Friend—"Well, since that—"

Freshman—"We were treated royally by our sisters of 1911 — given a party. Of course, the usual nourishment was offered — ice cream and cake. Besides there were all sorts of novel entertainments prepared for us and our banner was donated on that day, too. Parties are very enjoyable things!!"

Friend—"I quite agree with you."

Freshman—"Of course, I could keep on talking about the class of 1913 forever and ever; but real worth is always judged by actions, is it not?

P. S. Freshmen are permitted to be voluble.

Newcomb Freshman Class Poem.

I.

They were a happy Freshman class
Who on that bright fall morn
Tripped gaily up old Newcomb's steps
With hearts brim full of song
They were young, ah yes, and verdant, too.
But wisdom comes with age,
And who knew, from out that promising clan,
How many might prove sage?

II.

There was so much to be done, you know
So many clubs and things,
"Agonistic", "Latin", "Dramatics" too,
And "Glee" if they would sing;
So the exciting game wore on,
And these Freshman learned the art
Of doing a dozen things at once
And at one time — playing three parts;

III.

Then let us first cheer dear old Newcomb
Her trials, tribulations, and fun,
Even burdens, soon lightened and then cast off.
And battles hard fought — but still won;
And when we are all through with cheering
Let's remember these Freshmen and say —
May the straight, steady path they are treading
So continue forever and aye.

TULANE MEDICAL, the Pride of Tulane, what tender memories linger within its walls; what cherished hopes and ambition long since fulfilled, seem to permeate its atmosphere. With arms outstretched to the youth of the world, who seek knowledge within her halls, her call is answered by those of the Northernmost and Southernmost Climes, and as she spreads the mantle of Study and Understanding o'er each, her environment is such as to cast the highest honors upon those who best serve her.

Her reputation is spread broadcast, her curriculum on a par with other famous Universities, and the facility with which she inculcates the Art of Hippocrates, is such as to rank her amongst the highest.

The number and brilliancy of her graduates in the past, is best exemplified by a careful perusal of her successful career under the able leadership of Dean Chaille, whose name is a synonym of all that stands highest in the medical profession.

At present, the Medical Department of Tulane is most ably directed by Dean Isadore Dyer, the idol of the entire student body, and it is a foregone conclusion that with the rapid strides she is making under his directorship, the Medical Department not only remains the Pride of Tulane, but the clarion has sounded for one of the greatest modern institutions of learning in the world.
DR. ISADORE DYER M. D. Ph. B.,

Dean of the Medical Department and Professor of the Diseases of the Skin.
History of the Class '10, Medical.

To Thee, Whosoever Thou Art:

At last the pinnacle is reached. Step by step, after four years of consistent labor and diligent application, the Tulane Medical Class of '10 arises Phoenix-like, out of the ashes of oblivion.

Coupled with the fact that her class contains men who will soon make such eminent scientists as Osler, Holt, Da Costa and Kelly realize their inferiority, 1910 stands pre-eminent as being the first class to graduate complying fully with the rules and regulations of the new and higher standard, as raised by the leading Medical Universities of the World.

Whilst 'tis true, some members composing the class have become more conspicuous than others, due,—well, one cannot very well say, to erudition, but on account of originality of ideas (ideas which even the most learned scientists have been unable to glean); yet, withal, her history in the main is glorious to contemplate.

Since her incipiency 1910 has taken an active part in college athletics, and statistics show conclusively, where she not only furnished the majority of material for the Foot-Ball Squad, but was well represented on both the Track and Basket-Ball Teams; thereby establishing a record second to none in the History of Fair Tulane. The success that attended her many efforts is attributed to the fact that peace and harmony prevail amongst the different fraternities whose personnel enters largely into the make-up of the Class; also to the fact that the history of her career is fraught with deep learning and scientific research, which makes the most irrepressible and egotistical concede her entitled to the highest encomiums.

Fully realizing the manifold responsibilities she will soon fall heir to, nineteen ten willingly and unalteringly goes forth to do battle with the Grim Reaper, and. "'Tis a consummation devoutly to be wished" that her sons, in years to come, will prove themselves worthy of her trust.

So we now bid thee good-bye, dear old Tulane: good-bye to thee, dear Alma Mater. From the bottom of our hearts, we thank thee. Adieu, Adieu.

Davis, L. C., Daleville, Miss.—ΙΝΑ. Comforter of widows. For doing this he derives a small revenue.

De Gravelle, C. C., Patterson, La.—ΦΒΠΙΙ. De Gravelle for King. Down with Democracy.

de Mahy, M. J., St. Martinsville, La.—ΦΒΠΙΙ. Inclined to be effeminate. This condition promptly relieved by more frequent contact with the male sex.
Evans, B. P., Conway, Miss. The swiftest hoe-hand that ever drew the breath of life. "Oh what possessed me to leave the farm?"

Feagin, H. C., Livingston, Tex.—XZX. Would rather dance at the Odd Fellows Hall than eat. One derives amusement whilst watching his pedal extremities in operation.

Fuqua, W. A., Quanah, Okla.—TMC. Well known for many acts of bravery. When attacked by a wild hair recently, removed it with his finger-nails.

Greene, N. E., Holly Springs, Miss.—ΦΧ. TMC. Oh John Barleycorn, Barleycorn, Barleycorn. Oh John Barleycorn, me oh my.

Green, Chas. C., Houston, Tex.—General flunkie of Charity Hospital. Lost his hair trying to think.

Humphries, S. R., Barton, Fla.—Goes through life with his head-light hung on the wrong end.

Harrell, L. H., Plant City, Fla.—TMC. Advocate and promoter of tobacco juice therapy.

Henry, G. E., De Funiak Springs, Fla.—AKK. When on the scent of disease, generally uses his diagnose.

Hearin, W. C., Rena Lara, Miss.—ΦΒΙ. An 18 k grafter. You don't see your money going, it goes so fast.

Harris, H. H., Eastman, Ga.—B.S.; A.M.S. Thinks he has a mission to perform. Certainly—omission.

Hountha, J. M., New Orleans, La.—A.B. Wants to get married as soon as possible. Make Man tablets did the work.

Kennedy, T. P., Jonesville, S. C.—Oh Mother, Mother, seek your child.

Luckett, E. B., Alexandria, La.—Claims now and then to get an inspiration. How about expiration?

Landry, F. N., New Iberia, La.—ΦΒΗ. His troubles are all interne (al). A full blooded Cajin whose ancestry dates back to the coming of Evangeline.

Langston, D. T., Oakville, Miss.—T.M.C.; D. O.A. Worries about what Tynes will do next.

Lisenbee, A. M., Winona, Miss.—T.M.C. Left the farm to study medicine. The farmers union lost a good man, and the medical fraternity gains nothing.

Livingston, J. J., Hot Springs, Ark. —Like a cockroach. Once around its a hard matter to get him away.

Lischkoff, M. A., Pensacola, Fla.—A.M.S. Matzos, Matzos-balls, Matzos ball soup, Matzosponem.

Larose, J. B., New Orleans, La.—ΦΒΗ. Fate rather unkind lately. Here’s hoping all will be well.

Lindner, H. J., New Orleans, La.—Easy to see through as he is always making a spectacle of himself.

McGehee, E. C., Liberty, Miss.—T.M.C. His neck bears mute witness to the fact that he is descended from a species of giraffe.

Mitchell, J. G., Dubach, La.—The living skeleton. Looking for a fat wife. Correspondence solicited.

Milner, R. M., Westhoff, Tex.—Feingold’s Pet. Why does he eye me all the time? Coises.

Miller, W. E., Mt. Herman, La.—HOA. The noisiest noise that ever noised about Tulane. Claims can pick 600 lbs. cotton any old day.

Moore, H. T., Bolivar, Tenn.—ΔΚΕ; ΦΚ. The idol of the Newcomb girl; the pride of the Tulane man. Oh you foot-ball hero.

McClenendon, J. H., Amite, La.—AKK. Another youth gone wrong. More apt to die from head failure than from heart failure.
Miller, C. S., Norwood, La.—B.S.; KΣ. The least said about him the better. Become acquainted and judge for yourself, himself, and ourselves.

Magruder, T. V., Hollandale, Miss.—B.S.; ΛΚΚ; ΦΔΘ; ΘΕ. The University draws on him for its supply of gas. Demonstrations given on short notice.

Murphy, T. W., Lumberton, Miss.—A son of Old Erin. He’s so green that ripening is entirely out of the question.

Murphy, P. F., New Orleans, La.—Pictures are deceiving. So is Peter. His hirsute adornment trimmed for the occasion; of course, not because he really needed it.

Neal, T. M., Wharton, Tex.—ΘΝ. No. 9 shoes, two corns and Uncle Green. But—what’s the use?

Newhauser, M. A., New Orleans, La.—AMS; TMC. Responsible for these pessimistic delineations. If your feelings are hurt he will comfort you, or you can comfort him. Be sure he don’t get your goat.

Oliver, C. K., New Orleans, La.—The amateur photographer is responsible for a good many of life’s misrepresentations.

Odeneal, T. H., Jackson, Miss.—ΚΣ; ΛΚΚ. The result of long continued dissipation and negligence.

Pope, W. H., Jr., Doxette, Tex.—Afraid Peter will murder him while he sleeps. Not as holy as his name implies.

Parker, P. E., Brownsville, Tenn.—Professional crackaloo player. Likes the square, girls? No—Nickles, und Quarters, und Dimes und Copper Cents.

Peacock, C. A., Columbus, Ga.—XZX. How funny. See a peacock? Of course we do.

Parker, A. C., Marion, Ark.—B.S.; ΥΚΑ; ΘΕ. Still water runs deep, but some don’t run at all.

Patterson, J. C., Dothan, Ala.—TMC. He gave her some money and then she went out of business.

Pridgen, R. E., Thomas- ton, Tex.—Is so short his corns give him headache; yet, has pugilistic aspirations.
Phillips, T. E., Cuba, Ala.—Plays medicine and studies crackaloo; outside of that he's all right, all right.

Roeling, H. W., Jr., New Orleans, La.—ΦΒΤ. Would get along much faster if he didn't lose so much time telling other people how smart they are.

Rankin, H. P., Brewton, Ala.—XZX; TMC. It's a pity he can't get a pair of suspenders to hold up his reputation as well as his trousers.

Robards, E. M., New Orleans, La.—ΔΟΑ. A pretty decent sort of fellow—after a Turkish Bath.

Ray, J. W., Wetumpka, Ala.—ΔΑΑ; ΑΚΚ. Looks like a priest. It's the picture what makes him appear intellectual; in reality a Boston Baked Bean.

Sheppard, J. K., Sligo, La.—Difficult for him to tie his little bull outside.

Salerno, E. F., New Orleans, La.—Onea nicea beega Doctor, Singa likea da Carus. Da Kinga Italia keesa him twicea ina da sama place.

Smith, J. W. A., McComb, Miss.—Often mistakes his good luck for ability. Rickets the cause of his peculiar deformity.

Segura, J. O., Erath, La.—ΦΒΙΙ, One fine Cajin gentlehomme. Come from ze Bayou Gon-Gon. Vive craw-feesh, beeg en leetle ones.

Stirling, E., Sulphur Springs, Tex.—A Texas long horn turned from the range four years ago to graze along the cobble stones and mud of Claiborne St.

Shanks, R. C., Kirvin, Tex.—Wry-neck. Pretty nice sort of fellow. (Gave the author a cigar to make this statement.)

Shaw, F. H., Marvin, Tex.—ΦΧ. Asleep for the past four years. Whisnant says he'll awake on Resurrection Morn.

Smith, G. W., De Ridder, La.—Is his facial hyperaemia caused by too much Lydia Pinkham.

Todd, E. B., New Orleans, La.—It is still an unsettled question whether bleaching the hair leads to softening of the brain, or vice-versa...
Triolo, J. M., El Paso, Tex.—X2X. Oh, how I love to console, yes sir console; that is a plump little widow.

Trice, H. S., Tupelo, Miss.—ΔΚΕ; ΦΧ. The sight of a pistol causes him great uneasiness. Why?

Tynes, C. E., Norfield, Miss.—ΔΩΑ. Why he persists in telling the girls he is a Post Graduate we can not account for.

Terrell, G. C., Prentiss, Miss.—Б.С.; Class Secretary and Treasurer; ΔΩΑ; ΚΑ. If College interferes with pool, give up College.

Tyler, L. L., Rogue Chitto, Miss.—When a train of thought tries to pass through some men’s brains, it usually gets ditched.

Whisnant, R., Gordon, Ala.—A big skrew footed guinea from the backwoods of Alabama. Yeates says his feet contain intestines.

Wood, J. P., New Orleans, La.—A typical type of dementia facialis. Too bad. He should have died young.

Watkins, J. A., New Orleans, La.—ΦΒΙ; ΔΚΕ. Has matrimonial inclinations. Says, “’Tis not well that one should live alone.” Slidell will at last become affiliated with the medical profession.

Wallace, R. B., Natchitoches, La.—President. A KK; ΣΧ. Long live the President. (The writer is here enjoined from stating anything that would appear disrespectful but Alfred states the rest of the “dope” goes).

Walther, H. W. E., New Orleans, La.—ΦΒΙ. Ht vas der smell uf der Hos- bital vot make him dink he iss er surgican. Ach Heinie iss wittwe.

West, D. P., Bristol, Va.—M. Ph.; ΣΧ. Why don’t his tongue stop waggings occasionally and give his brains a chance to catch up? Too late—he’s too far behind.

Watson, W. H., Pelahatchie, Miss.—XXK. If he applies himself to medicine as he has to the plow in the past, millions are within his grasp.

Yancey, E. R., Rhine- hart, La.—ΤΜC. A pione er from Catahoulia Parish. Can milk a cow up side down.

Yeates, N., Maben, Miss.—B. S.; ΘΧ. A minstrel whose art is recognized by a few. In his declining years, hope the majority will be with him.
Because.

Because she knew so many little loves,
Because she played with every shining folly,
Because she filled both hands with easy toys,
And saw the truth — and called it melancholy —

Fate sent her many little loves to know,
And shining folly seemed to seek her, only.
And easy toys were hers — but, at the end,
She whispered, passing — "God! I have been lonely."

Fannie Heaslip Lea.
Junior Class History.

Fain would I call upon the Muses, and make sacrifices unto the Gods to endow me with efficient fluency, to pen the eulogies of the Class of 1911. But of what use; for even the great Herodotus or Livy could hardly do justice to our worth or merit; and so, like Burns, “if my Muse, tho' homely in attire, may touch the heart,” I will feel that I have not labored in vain in chronicling the annals of 1911.

Some where back in the dim past, we began a mere existence in the land of becoming physicians, and after passing through Freshman verdure and Sophomore conceit, we were most cordially welcomed this session as Juniors in the halls of upper-classmen. What a great change has come over us! “Our salad days when we were green in judgement” have slipped by; and with them many familiar faces. No longer, do we breathe the sweet, exhilarating and balmy atmosphere of the campus; and into oblivion, has passed the stage when we poised to know whether or not we were really becoming “Doctors.” We have passed half of that distance; and now, every minute is bringing us closer to the goal. We were made to realize our position, when on October, the first 1909, we met for the third time; but, on this occasion, in our old home, the Hutchinson Memorial Medical Department in Canal St. We were surrounded by new, yet once, familiar faces; for we were separated from our Senior colleagues for a year. The only countenances, which we cared whether or not our opties rested upon, were those of our “Dear Professors”, some of whom were recollections of former night-mares; and—some, of pleasant dreams that were to come.

Among ourselves, we were extremely happy; for had we not attained the care-free existence of Juniorship? This was expressed by a broad smile and a hyperaemic hand from shaking welcomes which were borne fairly well by each individual. More than that, our most cordial welcome was extended to our new fellow classmates. Amidst it all, we were capable of realizing that the course we are pursuing is the most enjoyable and beneficial to mankind for humanity’s cause; and that the life work that we have mapped out for ourselves is being laid on a firm foundation in “dear old Tulane.”

“Self-praise is conceit” has often been quoted, yet I cannot help but say that this year marked a brilliant opening into our hospital training. The class being divided into quarters, separated us for a part of our well spent hours. Each part of the class quizzed anxiously and unrelentingly those of other sections to ascertain what would be their future encounters which made each strive to attain higher honors. Why should I say we have no short-comings? We are humans; and, not gods — this speaks for itself. However with our superb and readily-grasping minds we stand to conquer the battle of life. Every individual member has shown his most earnest intentions by putting forth every effort to accomplish his purpose. Naturally the question, — have we obtained any results from our “grinding?” Probably so; for often have such edicts been proclaimed as, “being the most accomplished class that ever entered the college.” Then, looking through the vistas of the near future, we see ourselves, Seniors, bearing their insignia, the cap and gown.

Medical Freshman History.

In performing the duty that devolves upon the historian of every class, it is with mingled feelings of pleasure and pride that we record the events of the class of 1913, the just deserts that they have won and the manner in which they have met the exigency of every occasion.

This is the first page of our history. When the portals of Tulane were opened to the Medical Class of 1913, it was soon evident, that there were those present, who could cope with the requirements of the four years course. The devolved obligations have been met with by fully developed men in mental as well as physical capacity. Brains and brawn have been applied, reinforced by strength and unity of purpose and originality of thought. Leaders are developing, and new paths of learning will be probed into and doubts cleared up by a body of men who have the stamp of determination and success.

The diligence which has been manifested, evidences the determination to make ’13 a record class, both in Athletics and in Scholarship.

When volunteers for Varsity Foot-ball were called for, we produced two invaluable men in the persons of Sentell and McLeod. The Freshman Foot-ball squad, ably captained by Sentell is a distinguished feature in itself.

Class organization was soon effected with the following officers installed: Waldemar R. Metz, Pres; John W. Brandon, Vice-President; Charles (Chick) Monrose, Sect. and Treas; Maxwell Moody, Historian; Lewis H. Levy, Tulane Weekly Representative; and King Rand and “Doctor” Higdon JAMBALAYA Editors.

Early in the session, the class lost one of its members, Wise, who on account of ill health was compelled to leave college. His loss is to be regretted, for he was universally liked and a good student.

In speaking of the individual members of the class, it is not amiss to say that each is a joy and a pride, possessing certain individual attributes which distinguished him from his class-mates.

The popular superstition that ’13 is an unlucky number caused considerable comment at the opening of College. Something had to be done to ward off the evil spirit and “The Green Friars of ’13, were organized (by an unknown founder) to undertake, in due time, this arduous task. This society certifies four lucky years and a more pious (?), fortunate (?) and purer (?) body of men is hard to find. Such angels (?) could do no less than drive misfortune from our midst.

In bringing our first History to a close, we will say, that mindful of the many eyes upon our success, we put aside our childish ways, and hope that when we are weighed in the balance, we will not be found wanting. We are daily reminded that “Us don’t have no trouble, does us boys?” and sic semper fiant.

CLASS HISTORY.

"Class of 1911," the very phrase itself, sounds pompous and awe-inspiring, so need it be necessary to go into details regarding this class? Hardly, for their reputation is known in every direction good Nature's winds blow. The first year of our existence we elected W. S. Rembert, President, O. A. Weiss, Vice-President, A. Martin, Secretary, and R. F. Sherwood, Treasurer. The class kept on its glorious road under the guidance of these officers, and this year, the officers elected seen above, to be now considered almost in its zenith of glory.

We have shone both mentally and physically, and it remains but for us to await the arrival of the Senior year, and therein strive to make ours the best class ever graduated from the Tulane Dental Department.

Did they ever look like this? And didn't you ever feel like this?
History of the Teachers' College.

A few days after the opening of the session of nineteen-nine and ten, the members of the Teachers' College of Tulane met and elected officers for the ensuing year, and needless to say, these officers are fulfilling their duties most honorably.

During the three years of its existence this department of the University has progressed wonderfully. This year's enrollment shows an increase of sixty per cent over that of last year.

Although young in years we have records which will answer for themselves. In college athletics we have one of the best track men in the South.

As yet we have no separate building, but we are at present domiciled in Gibson Hall and at Newcomb College. But we possess all the hope and enthusiasm of youth that we will be granted buildings of our own in the near future. The Teachers' College is gaining ground rapidly and as time rolls on it will do honor to the great University of which it is a part.

The nation, especially the South, is in great need of good, efficient, college-trained instructors, and it may be said that the graduates of the Teachers' College will fulfill these requirements most skillfully. May Louisiana, the South and the whole country be thus relieved of the want for an excellent professional school for teachers.

The broad outlook and intellectual spirit of the Teachers' College can in no way be better grasped than by a class scrutiny of our motto: Training, Sympathy, Service. The Teachers' College believes that in order to advance both the interests of the pupil and of the instructor, continued training at a well equipped college and a sincere study of educational problems are needed. We further believe that the teacher should have sympathy with the children who are gathering their materials with which to combat against the world under his or her guidance. Finally, we believe that the service rendered to the child, to the community, and to society at large is one of the noblest acts of God, and one which will redound to the credit of the individual and to the Teachers' College of the Tulane University of Louisiana.

Oh, we're all frank and twenty-when the spring is in the air--and we've faith and hope aplenty--and we've life and love to spare.
History of the Law Department of 1910.

To a stranger who stops to view the classic structures and examine the massive buildings facing Audubon Park, there is nothing surprising in the cadavers which decorate the long grooved tables in Richardson Hall, nor in the gloomier portraits of the Library. He passes without a glance the commodious office of Prexie; he pays little attention to the sad-faced loungers in the Faculty room and surmises with the help of the guide that they are students waiting to appear before the Self-Help Committee. The various and varying parts of the human form divine (cast in plaster of Paris) are trite and commonplace,—which means so much to those zealous pursuers of knowledge who take "special" courses in Art, Architecture and Needlework. But let our wanderer stroll by chance into the Law Library, made imposing by rows upon rows of books, hallowed by age, made sacred by the dust of centuries, representing the thoughts of so many illustrious heroes,—all these inspire him at once with a sense of his own littleness of the mutability of human affairs,—of the greatness of the Judges and Justices who recline in seeming leisure in recumbent posture on the tables. He wonders how great men can so associate with common mortals,—involuntarily he reaches for his hat,—a corpulent gentleman wearing a green derby approaches; the tourist stammers, stutters, that he is "just lookin' around" and overawed by the majesty of the loafing Freshmen recedes to the exit and no-presses his presence while the 1. F.s. remark on the non compos mentisness of other beings than those who can make the layman believe that he needs the professional grafter to write a contract so it can be broken or a will and testament which can never be probated.

The first year class has already demonstrated its ability by reorganizing that august and gusty organization known in professional parlance as the "Moot Court" and which to the uninitiated suggests dread and dangerous things suggestive of the Spanish Cloister or the original Star Chamber. By their early mastery of the famous "Black and White Horse" case they proved themselves excellent equestrians, and Mac and Monte are being urged to enter the Channel competition after their excellent showing in the race in which "I row my boat across the Mississippi." It is understood among a few of the Inner Temple that a challenge was issued the famous Polehan, offering a fabulous wager that any member of the Class could get further away from earth than he, but nothing has been determined.

Upon being properly sworn in and attested none of the Second Year man would testify as to his mastery of the subject of Bankruptcy and just as willingly any one will agree that the Civil Code stands squarely against the premature disinheritance of the child—to the detriment of the budding attorney's modest retaining fee. By this time, too, it would seem that the class had learned that even a lawyer (if he is a Professor) sometimes means what he says and daily grades sometimes count for something.

The Seniors we must pass with only the mention. We dare not criticise and we may not euphemise, but suffice it to say that the rest of the Department patiently and anxiously await their graduation.

TULANE'S REPRESENTATIVES IN DEBATE AGAINST VIRGINIA AND NORTH CAROLINA.
Tulane Oratorical and Debating Council.

Messrs. E. Phelps and C. E. Dunbar, Jr., represented Tulane against the University of Virginia. Messrs. H. W. Kaiser and N. Callan defended our University against North Carolina. The triangular debate proved a draw, each University winning that debate in which it argued on the affirmative.

The Council proved its efficiency by the highly successful manner in which the debates were conducted. The officers, who are at present striving to better our Forensics are Mr. C. E. Dunbar, Jr., Chairman, and Mr. J. G. Heller, Secretary. The members are: Messrs. C. E. Dunbar, J. G. Heller, R. F. White, M. Meyer, J. Brewer, George Weare, H. W. Kaiser, G. Levy, and Misses I. A Review of the Football Season.

BY COACH: BROWN.

The past foot-ball season was not as successful as expected by the coaches or students. In some games the team displayed a strong offense, but during the greater part of the season the men failed to work together in a satisfactory way, offering less offensive strength than the ability of the men warranted. The defensive work of the team during the season, with exception of the last game, was excellent, and lack of substitute material alone accounts for most of the scores made against Tulane this season.

The cause of the weak offense was the inability of the leaders to size up opponents' weakness, and the lack of that finesse essential to a strong offensive team. Injuries, and want of experience of the quarter backs, explains the many mistakes made by the team.

Four games were won, two lost, and two resulted in tie scores. When one considers under what adverse conditions the men worked, and what a small part of the student body encouraged the team by its presence at the games and by active cheering, he must credit this year's team with a remarkable display of grit and spirit.

The Tulane team began practice when most of its rivals were well advanced in their work. Because of the number of new men to be developed, due to the graduation of most of last year's stars, this was a decided disadvantage.

The practice game with the Y. M. G. C. was won by a score of 12 to 0. The game gave the coaches an idea as to the ability of some of the men and the weakness of others.

The first game—against the University of Mississippi—was won by the individual work of a few of the team, as the visitors were far superior to Tulane in team work. The defense was very strong, as induced by Tulane's plucky stand on her 2 yd. line. Mississippi by a combination of luck and fumbles had six downs in which to carry the ball five yards for a touch down and victory, but was unable to advance the ball a yard.

Central of Kentucky had prepared especially for her game with Tulane, and won not because her team was better developed at the time. Individually Tulane had a better team and should have won, but poor headwork lost the game.

A. & M. of Mississippi lost to us by a score of 0—2 a small margin, but a defeat. The score should have been 7—0 in Tulane's favor, as the poor work of an official deprived Tulane of a touchdown. In this game as in the preceding ones, Tulane wasted energy enough to have scored several times. The best feature of the day was the splendid rooting of the entire student body, which was present but this one time during the season. If our President could only visit New Orleans every Saturday during the foot-ball season Tulane would be unbreakable.

The University of Cincinnati sent down a well coached team, but lost to us, 0—6. The teams were well matched as to speed and weight, but a cleverly executed forward pass gave us a score and victory.

The University of Texas tied us 10—10, but should have been beaten. The game was played under miserable conditions—rain and a muddy field—which gave the heavier Texans a big advantage. The first half ended 10 to 0 in Tulane's favor but Texas's ability to put in fresh men to relieve the worn out players, gave them the necessary offensive strength to overcome the dogged defense of Tulane's lone set of backs and ends. Every man on the team played a grand game and such work should have been rewarded with victory.

Alabama tied Tulane because our team lost its head and failed to play as coached in the first few minutes. The peculiar offense of the Alabama team bewildered the men at first. They forgot to form their defense as instructed and were scored on. That grit and spirit shown all the season asserted itself and the scoring by Alabama stopped. From then on Tulane outplayed Alabama and should have scored at least twice. Tulane's touchdown was the result of both old style plunging and a well executed forward pass.

Texas South Western not only defeated us, but outplayed us in every department of the game, with exception of the forward pass. They had the best team work and defense of any team which has visited New Orleans this year.

With a little better judgment on part of the leaders, Tulane would have had a clean sheet, with exception of the Thanksgiving game, for in that game she was outplayed. The men on the team all displayed interest, and in many instances sacrificed a great deal in order to play. The greatest trouble was lack of material and the non-support and lack of interest by student body. Tulane's team was a plucky one, full of fight and determination, and playing better when hard pressed than when out of danger.

Perfect harmony existed among players, and between players and coaches.
Coach "Buster" Brown.—A man well liked by the players, looked up to and admired by all. He was not a Coach who acted as an ornament, but had his regular uniform, and worked with the boys from the time practice began until it ended. Brown knew what each player could do, and is one of the best judges of foot-ball men in the South. The sentiment of the students and lovers of the game, is, that Brown deserves much credit for what he did for the Varsity.

Captain Moore.—Full Back and a good one, I am here to tell you. He hits the line wonderfully hard, and never fails to gain. At backing up the line he is nothing short of excellent. Authorities say he is the most accurate and surest forward passer in Dixie. Tate is quiet on the field, but knows exactly what is due his men, and stands up for that which is right and fair.
“Bookie” George.—End and Quarter. Was a star at end and when placed at quarter was even more of a star, making many sensational runs and tackles, and at all times showed good head-work by calling the right play at the right time. 165 lbs.

Nauman Scott.—End. Was one of the hardest players on the team. No interference was too strong for him to break up. 150 lbs.

Semmes Walmsley.—Left half back. Could be counted upon for a game at any time. With his speed and end runs, he was a dangerous man. His kicking was good throughout the season. 168 lbs.

Albert Dreyfuss.—Half Back. Could gain at any time and was great on handling forward passes and sizing up a play. On account of an accident “Drey” was unable to play the last few games. 155 lbs.
Clyde Webb.—Tackle on offense and backing up the line on defense was his job. There is no doubt but that he is one of the best tackles in the South. He keeps them all guessing as to how they can get by him. 190 lbs.

“SKinny” Scott.—Right Half on offense and defensive quarter. Was a hard worker and a sure tackler. Has the making of a great drop kicker. 148 lbs.

“Dick” Kock.—Center on offense and tackle on defense. Though very light he could always be depended upon to hold his part of the line, occasionally pulling off sensational tackles behind the line. 155 lbs.

“Tommy” Martin.—What he lacked in weight he made up in grit and always held his own against all comers whether in the position of tackle or guard. 140 lbs.
"Johnie" Nix.—Me "Big Boy." Covered his share of the ground and got in the way of more than one buck. Charged well. 20 lbs.

"Nick" Callan.—Though not as large as some of the linesmen was always there with the goods and never failed to do his part on defense and offense. 160 lbs.

Whisnant.—Although he never made a touchdown, "Old Whis" could be depended upon to open up a hole or block a play when called upon. 185 lbs.

"Bert" Ferrell.—Played a hard and heady game until he was crippled up and had to quit playing. Was very good in a broken field. He ran the team well 135 lbs.
“Tubby” Ellis.—Center on offense and tackle on defense. Always in the game. Could be counted upon to put a stop to any play coming over him. 150 lbs.

“Lanky” McCloud.—Mc was always on the jump. Although a linesman he often made beautiful tackles when an attempt was made to return a punt. On breaking up line plays he is hard to beat. 170 lbs.

Lester.—End... Although he was small he dumped the biggest of men. It was a pretty hard job to gain around “Little Scornful’s end. 138 lbs.

Coach Brown was so favorably impressed with him that he made him a present of a football outfit. Scott was also kind enough to lend him a beautiful watch, which enjoyed a visit to Baton Rouge.

Base Ball.

It appears from present indications, and the promises of both the captain and manager that Tulane will have an unusually successful baseball season this spring financially as well as from the standpoint of games won. It is thought that with the erection of our new grandstand, and with the new medical department on the campus to draw from, that the attendance will be sufficient to support a series of games here, and with this end in view, Mgr. Menefee has been corresponding with several leading colleges of the South, to play in New Orleans. Also he has about completed arrangements for a trip thru Alabama and Mississippi for a week or ten days, playing probably three universities.

With this trip as an attraction, it is expected that many men will come out and try for the team, and Capt. Bass assures the students that this is so, for he has already promises from nearly thirty men that they will endeavor to represent Tulane on the baseball field. A number of old Varsity men will be out, as well as a bunch of new ones, who also, to judge from their record have had valuable experience in playing the game.

Among the candidates for the team are Hardy, M. Moore, Carter, Tessier, J. S. Scott and Joe Montgomery, an old Georgetown man, all of whom are pitchers. Tate Moore and Vic Miller, are also expected out, and give assurance of doing great things on the slab this year. Out of this bunch, Tulane will be able to select a corps of twirlers that will hold their own with any in the South.

Behind the bat, Tulane will have her two former catchers, Callan and Whitsman, re-enforced by Tolson, McNealy, Baurn and Torio, all of whom are tried and experienced men.

In the outfield are Manager Bass who will hold down the left garden, R. Schmidt, McGee, Wahmsley, Bradburn and Bob Phillips. For first base, Traves and Sevier, both Varsity men will fight it out. To fill out the other in field positions Tulane will have, Menefee, Warren, Scott, Brown, Brockman, Pinkston and Baker Smith.

It can be seen from the foregoing that Tulane will be well represented this year, and the men trying for the team deserve the support and encouragement of the students.
Record of Tulane Track Team.

A. A. U. MEET MAY 8th, 1909, CITY PARK. RACE TRACK.

Tulane with a mere handful of entries came 3rd with a score of 15 points. Menefee, Moore, and Love each won a first place. Menefee took first in the broad jump with a jump of 20 feet 6 inches. Captain Moore captured the half mile with ease, lowering the Southern record by two seconds. Alvin Love had an easy time winning the running high jump. One of the principal events of the day was the relay race which was won by Tulane’s team composed of Wahmsley, Harris, Metz and Moore.

HOUSTON MEET, NOVEMBER 9th, 1909, HOUSTON, TEXAS.

The Triangular track meet between Tulane, Texas University, and the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas resulted in a victory for Texas, the final result being: Texas University 62 2-3, Tulane 30, A. & M. 27 1-3. For Tulane Schmidt won the 120 yard low hurdles, Menefee the broad jump, Wahmsley, the 440 yard dash, while Phillips came third in the mile and Menefee third in the 100 yard dash.
Bishop Moore.—Half mile and quarter mile.

Semmes Wamsley.—Quarter mile.

Reginald Schmidt.—220 hurdles and broad jump.

Alvin Love.—Higher jumper.

J. C. Menefee was omitted by mistake.

Far we know
the world is glorious and the goal a golden thing (and that God is not censorious) when his children have their fling
What's a Frat.

I

It's the fear of a knowing and bruise-bestowing old Goat.
Then the wish that it were but a goat—gentle goat!
While you clench at the side of old Charon's boat,
And feel that on Stygian waters you float
To a dismal strand where tormentors stand—and gloat!

Oh no! that's all wrong!
That's only a glib and gruesome song.
Never that
Was any Frat:
At least not mine.

II

It's the exalted glee that it ever must be to rush;
And to feel that your liquefied soul can but gush:
And all that you say and do is mush;
And it's grown inconvenient now to blush,
And the others go whistle! You'll get that fig—'tis a thistle—

Oh tush!
No! No! entirely wrong!
A really impudent baseless song!

Never all that
Was any Frat.
At least not mine.

III

It's a fair-minded band with a friendly hand stretched out:
Though the winds of the world may scold you and flout.
And justly perhaps may buffet about,
When you're almost turned in ignoble rout:
It's—stand! be true! they're looking to you—never doubt.

Oh well! that might be worse.
But since it's in verse,
Something like that
It's most every Frat:
At least so's mine.

Freshman, year of wide-eyed wonder,
"Rushing," meetings, dues begin;
After Sophomore, year of learning,
Then "the frat" means more than fun;
Ever Juniors, year of knowing,
Ratifies and proves this true;
Nor finds Senior, year of thinking,
Implications to this view.
These all later scatter will Yet find alumnae loyal still.

Zeta Beta Tau Club of New York.
Her college work might call and call
She simply would not do it all!
She had practiced till her throat was sore
And still she ought to do some more.
Dramatics.
With basket-ball she'd played until
The sight of one gave her a chill.
The captain said, "Play more to win,
"Why don't you take some interest in Athletics?"
The library was all read through
Her very thoughts were thought out too.
Her arguments were all worn thin.
Oh, she must spend a week more in Debating!
Oh, she was glad the car was slow,
And that she had so far to go!
If no one talked, and she felt right
She'd spend that time, instead of night,
In Study.

A Roundelay.

Now greet ye the Spring time,
Earth's morning and sing time,
The time of the birds,
Of green leaves,
And of joy;
Away with all sorrow
Or thought of tomorrow;
All hands in a circle;
All hearts in one chord.

The past it had sorrow,
And so will tomorrow;
But what does that matter?
This present can scatter
Away all their load
Of heart grief
And of woe.
As trees do the storm-drops
When stirred in their greening tops,
And bright shines the sun out,
And as gems the load falls.

Life, life, it is glowing,
And all things are growing;
So why not rise up
With new strength
And resolve?
Tho our steps may have halted
Our hearts and minds faltered,
Now sings in the Spring time
The present is here.

A Sonnet.

Sweet rose that blooms of majesty to tell,
Of passion, sin, of Heaven, and of Hell,
Of man's whole life from birth to ugly death,
Thy petals tell me that thou once did pine
For one, whose heart rose up in nature's breath
To meet the sweetest essence, I call thine.
O little daisy monarch of the light,
Fair emblem of the enemy of night,
Raise up thy head and tell me, dost thou love?
O pansy answer to that question I
Have put to all the beauteous flowers of
That garden 'neath the Master's watchful eye.
I asked the violet if in love 'twas glad,
It answered it had been—I knew it had.

The Word of Adam.

A garden full of sweet and pretty flowers
Selected I as worship of my powers
The violet gave the modesty it had.
The rose, its blush of passion and its youth,
The heliotrope, its humble plea and sad
The pansy, its demand of justice, truth.
The fairest lilly gave me of its purity;
Carnations were of love and faith a surety.
With these I built an ideal in my heart
Of a companion that had suited me.
As though 'twere sculptured by the finest art.
And seemed an ideal that could hardly be,
Yet when I'd built it after many hours,
I found another had surpassed my powers.

I.

She is flame pure flame the very soul of it
Oh the red glow of her heart and her madcap of flashing wit!
Oh the white gleam of her truth and the pure gold of her worth
And her leaping, towering scorn of all meanness on the earth.

II.

She is smoke, soft curling smoke that floats on high so free
Among the gentle roaming clouds her spirit loves to be,
And often of deep mysteries beyond the ken of day,
In thought apart she muses, wrapt in meditation grey.

III.

And ashes? These as well her nature must embrace:
She is not made of essence pure without an earthy trace.
Her missed achievements, wasted powers and thoughtless, fruitless strife,
Lie heaped all meaningless within the crucible of life.

Ancient Order of Kappa Kappa Mu.

THETA EPSILON NUTA CHAPTER.

APPLICATION No. 49.

By the unanimous vote of the members convened in formal session of the K. K. M. on the night of December 14, of the year of our Lord 1909, in their elaborate clubrooms, No. 1428 Prince George Place, it was decided to ask you to become a member of this ancient and honorable order. Since you are a candidate from the State of Louisiana, we feel it our duty to take you into our good fellowship. It is further very evident that your desire of becoming an alumnus cannot be better fulfilled than by joining our great order, as its main rock of foundation, when it was first founded away back in the hoary days of antiquity, was that of brotherly help, and to give a boost to the down dog. This feeling has been demonstrated in many a case, and will so continue until the walls of each and every college in which we have an altar will be laid low. To avoid any unpleasantness which are carried to their fullest extent during one’s career as a candidate for the honor of being an alumnus it is advisable that you join the aforesaid ANCIENT ORDER OF THE GRAND CONCLAVE OF THE KNIGHTS OF THE KAPPA KAPPA MU on the night of the Dec. 16, 1909, on which night our next meeting is held. If you accept this invitation of the aforesaid ORDER OF THE K. K. M., which is only offered to a few and then only once in their lifetime, you will let it be known by placing our colors on the left buttonhole of the lapel of the outer coat as a pledge, and affixing your signature, after filling out the questions above named. Strict silence is to be maintained as to this invitation whether you join or not.

Clubs.

Between Tulane and Newcomb
There are Clubs for everything;
There's a Club for those who dance,
And a Club for those who sing.
There's a Club for those who read,
And a Club for those who run,
And then we have the "J. U. G.'s" who only want some fun.
To sway the Student Body
Some spirits do incline,
And then again there're others
Who behind the foot-lights shine;
There're Clubs for every state
The Union calls her own——
With all these 'tis very strange if anyone's alone.

Professor Alcee Fortier,
Tulane University of La.
Dear Sir:

Forming part of the American Whig Society Established at Princeton University, I conceived the idea to found for my young colleagues a medal called the "French Medal" and which, each year, will be awarded to the victor in a debate on French Politics. I believe that it is very useful that young people should be au courant of contemporary international affairs, and that such a debate, in every respect, can but produce excellent results. My experience at Princeton last winter has besides confirmed my hopes on the subject.

I have from that time, conceived the desire to mark, by a similar creation, the souvenir of my two visits to the Tulane University in 1889 and 1893, visits which will be I hope, followed by many others. You know whether I love Louisiana, whether everything recalls France, especially the manner in which one undergoes misfortune, and in which one recovers from it.

May the very modest prize which I institute recall to your students the part taken by my country in the creation of theirs, it is my most sincere wish. I give it the name of the great citizen whose loss we mourn, whose life was without stain and whose death was without fear. It will be the "Carnot Medal."

I beg you to translate and publish this letter, to transmit it especially to Col. Johnston whom it concerns particularly. May he see in it a homage rendered to his great character, as well as to the fine University of which he is the venerated and zealous President. And as for you, my dear Mr. Fortier, please accept the renewed assurance of my most devoted sentiments.

Baron Pierre de Coubertin.

AND ITS ALWAYS FAIR WEATHER WHEN GOOD FELLOWS GET TOGETHER
A Doctor’s Degree.

It was the morning of his last examination and John Bullard was thinking of his college career now closing. The night before just as he had settled himself for studying a call had come from little freckled-face Billy whom he had once befriended and who ever since had entertained a passionate regard for “Dr. John.” As he sat holding the hand of the little chap Bullard recalled his own childhood in his shabby little home, his ambition to study medicine, and his joy when the dream was realized. He thought tenderly of the mother who had encouraged him in all his plans, of the gray-haired father who had sent him off to college with cheerful words, and of the sacrifices which both had made to keep him there. The work had not been easy for him. Equipped with only a country-school education and handicapped by awkwardness and unfamiliarity with city conditions, he had often felt discouraged, but still he plodded on with ever increasing effort, until now but one obstacle remained—a final examination. Clinical Diagnosis was the subject and, though worn from the loss of sleep and without definite preparation, he felt sure that he could pass. Then, a Doctor’s degree! How much that meant to him! More hard work, yes, but also independence. He could relieve his father from the strain under which he had labored for four years. He could repay in part his mother for her toil and patience and unfailing trust in him.

Billy was sleeping now so Bullard gave a few directions to the mother and left for the examination room. He felt tired from the strain of the past night’s vigil, but what did that matter now the end was so near. He hurried along thinking of the future and his face as he entered the examination room reflected only happy thoughts. The old professor, who had so often praised and encouraged him, gave him the questions. He took a seat in the back of the room and glanced at the first question. He realized that he did not know all he ought to make a good answer. He cast his eye rapidly down the page. His lips became dry; he breathed uncomfortably; he began to feel ill. He realized that he was vague on nearly every question; he had only a general knowledge, the facts had entirely escaped his memory.

If he could write something on each question it was doubtful whether he would be able to pass. Then he saw that he knew nothing at all about the last one. He stared at the paper and tried in vain to recall something on the subject. The paper dropped from his relaxed hand. The room became a blur. He looked blankly into the distance. The goal that had seemed so near and so bright a half-hour before grew dim and uncertain. He saw the future of his dreams vanishing like a mist. He thought of the years of toil and deprivation his father and mother had endured. Just for this! To have a son return to them and say, “I have failed!” He could see his gray-haired father with the tired eyes changed to accusing ones. He could see his poor little mother broken-hearted. He knew she would say nothing of his failure. She would greet him in the same old way, but that would cut even deeper. He thought of her pale face, of the loving, trustful eyes. Oh, he couldn't stand it! He couldn't return to her this way!... yet... and what was to prevent? ... Could he? ... What a thought! He couldn't! Still... no one would ever suspect. He would change beyond recognition what help he might get. The goal came nearer. It was bright again. He did not realize that it was illuminated with a false, artificial light. The path suggested seemed very easy. His future would be assured; his father would be proud of him; his mother's delight would be unbounded— but, could he look into those trusting eyes!

“Oh!” he groaned aloud, and his head fell heavily against his arm outstretched on the desk.

“Mr. John Bullard is hereby summoned to appear before the Court of Honor to answer a charge of illegally procuring assistance during his examination in Clinical Diagnosis.

Bullard crushed the paper in his hand. He opened it again to see the date appointed. It was that night. He knew only too well what this meant. There were a judge, twelve jurymen, a prosecuting and defending attorney. They weighed matters with precision and calmness. If the accused was convicted immediate expulsion was the result. He walked slowly across the campus and climbed the stairs to his room. He found his room-mate reading. He smoothed out the crumpled paper and laid it before his friend. When Jack Witherspoon read the notice he bounded out of his chair:

“Outrageous!” he ejaculated.

“I want you to be my attorney, Jack,” Bullard answered without emotion. Jack noted the palor of his cheek, the set, nerveless face, and for a moment a queer sensation took possession of him. But he went forward and gave Bullard a resounding whack on the back:

“Cheer up, old man, don't look like a dead dog! Just thing who your lawyer is! Even if the preposterous thing were so you could depend on yours truly to pull you through the mess all right!”

They worked on the case all the afternoon. About half an hour before they were to appear in court, Witherspoon looked earnestly at his room-mate:

“Say, Bullard, you really didn't do it, did you?” he asked.

Bullard turned on him his eyes blazing,

“Do you doubt my honor?” he cried.

“No, of course I don't, you mugwump! I merely wanted you to deny the charge in just that spirit. You were going around with such a 'hang-dog' air. I thought I'd give you a bih in the face and sprinkle a little starch into you. I've done it! I think I'm a very clever lawyer, don't you?” They both laughed and the tension was somewhat relieved, yet Witherspoon could not rid himself of a certain uncomfortable feeling.

* * * * *

The hall was crowded. The jury was in its place. The judge in cap and gown sat in the center of the stage. A hush fell upon the room as Bullard rose to be sworn. The usual formalities were gone through with.

“Guilty or Not Guilty?”

A moment's silence then:

“Not Guilty!”
"Will you swear it?"
"I will!"

The prosecuting attorney, Baldwin, was evidently nervous. On the day of the examination his place had been opposite Bullard and he had noticed his strange conduct. He had seen the blankness written on Bullard's face as he read the questions and had heard the agonizing exclamation that fell from his lips. So when his room-mate, Richard Davis, who had sat on Bullard's right, received a summons to appear for cheating, Baldwin was confident that he would have no difficulty in proving Davis innocent. Davis was Vice-President of the Young Men's Christian Association and though not thoroughly popular was universally trusted. Yet Baldwin had always admired Bullard and knew that his veracity was unimpeachable.

The Professor had looked over the papers the night after examination. In the last question, there was an undisputable similarity in the answers of Bullard and Davis. He remembered that the two had sat next each other. He examined the papers more closely. As he investigated he became more and more convinced that one or the other had received unlawful aid. There was an idea in the papers entirely new and original, one that he had never given the class himself, and which it was very improbable that two would think of, especially two sitting side by side. So he had reported the whole affair and had left it in the hands of the student body.

The case progressed. Witnesses were sworn and their evidence given. Nearly all the witnesses had been called and there seemed to be very little hope for Bullard's cause. His jaws were clinched and his expressionless eyes stared straight in front of him. The witnesses had said little, but that little was a telling weight in the balance of justice. One had said that Bullard was not in his rooms all night. Another proved that he had not gone elsewhere to study as his books were left on his desk. All of which went to show that he had gone into his examination unprepared. Finally the prosecuting attorney arose to give his statement. He pointed out the significant facts in the evidence: then told how he had watched Bullard during examination, told of the bewilderment on his face when he read the questions and the agonizing exclamation, indicative of mental struggle.

Jack Witherspoon rose and summed up his case, but he saw the overwhelming circumstantial evidence against Bullard and realized the uselessness of any little he might say. The jury filed out. There was hardly a word spoken during their absence. Bullard was evidently in a stupor. Witherspoon was nervously running his fingers through his hair. The ante-room door opened. The twelve robed men filed slowly in and took their seats. A paper was passed to the judge. He arose. "John Bullard has been found guilty of gaining illegal assistance during his examination in Clinical Diagnosis. The punishment is expulsion."

A silence as of death was on the room. Witherspoon reached out his hand, laid it on Bullard's arm.

"Oh, John, I'm sorry! My God! how sorry!"

This seemed to arouse the dazed man. He pushed the arm almost roughly from him. He arose and faced the audience. His eyes burned black from his face of chalk. He seemed to find his voice with difficulty and then a deep resonant flow of words came forth. "Boys, I've been convicted of cheating, and, to all appearances, justly. But I swear to you by all that I have ever esteemed, that I am innocent. It is true I went to my examination unprepared. It is true I was not in my room the night before. A sick child had sent for me and I had to go. When I realized how little I knew about the subject in hand, I was tempted to cheat, but the exclamation that was used as evidence against me was the outward sign of a moral victory. It was the thought of those at home that almost led me to disgrace. It was the thought of them that rescued me from that perilous brink of ruin. If you knew my mother you wouldn't inflict this erroneous sentence upon me. I am a scholarship boy and even so am kept here only by the untiring efforts of my parents. Can I return to the two old people and say, 'Your son is a failure. He has disgraced you. He is a convicted thief. He is only to be shunned. Oh, boys, can you let me break their hearts?" He stopped exhausted. Across the room, a man arose and as he walked, the sound of his feet-steps pained the ear. It was Davis. His face was white with agony. "There's been a mistake," he announced, "I have only one thing to say. John Bullard is innocent— I copied the questions from his paper!"
A Change In Tactics.

"I'm very sorry", said the new minister, and at the evident humility in his tone Vanette frowned impatiently, "I don't seem to be able to do anything to please you to-day." His gaze wandered from the ungainly skeleton wharves and the water, grey and green in the afternoon sun, to the vine-covered caves of the parsonage showing through the tree-tops of an adjacent lawn. One would not have judged humility a garment suited to the new minister's broad shoulders, but in Vanette's presence it invariably fell upon them.

"I've been trying to tell you—I hoped you'd see—I'm not the man to dance attendance on a girl all summer for the mere fun of the thing, Miss Vanette!" No" murmured Vanette, "No, I suppose not. As rector of St. Timothy's—" her words were disconnected and powerless, the subject evidently possessed little interest for her. The new minister's face flushed slightly. Had she been a man he would have carried the conversation with assertion, but since she was only a slip of a girl with gypsy eyes and a dimple in the corner of her red mouth he accepted the snub meekly:

"Don't misunderstand me," he begged and then turned the conversation suddenly and awkwardly at sight of her stormy face.

"Perhaps—you'd like to—go rowing?" there was more than a suggestion of uncertainty in the question. The girl turned towards him impatiently and with a vicious little fling skidded the pink cone which she had been holding across the sand.

"Perhaps—I'd like to—go rowing?" she mocked. "Am I to consider that an invitation?" her eyes filled suddenly and inexplicably with angry tears and she scrambled to her feet that the man might not see and attempt conclusions. "Wait here" she commanded ungraciously, "I'll have to run up to the house for my hat. There's a beastly glare on the water. No, as he moved quickly, "You can't get it for me, just wait."

The new minister watched with a perplexed expression in his honest eyes the little white-clad figure that sped across the narrow strip of beach and shell-road and lawn. All the mathematics, the Greek and Latin of his college days had failed to furnish him with a problem which baffled him so completely as the wooing of Vanette. Very young in worldly wisdom and having only the barest knowledge of women, even those in books, he remained helpless before the question that has conquered many a man. He was quite sure, even as the "many men" were, that he could make her care for him in some way. What way? Always the wave of humility swept over him when he broached the subject and always Vanette's wrath arose. The new minister was indeed a very miserable young man. He watched the trailing smoke from a steam-ship upon the horizon with brooding, unhappy eyes and the sudden impact of a small but solid body with his own, sent him sprawling in the sand. The small body rolled at his feet, a muddle of briar-scratched legs, short bedraggled skirts and wildly waving arms. A faded sunbonnet had slipped down over the face belonging to the body but the new minister recognized the culprit by the crime. Vanette's young cousin was of an impetuous nature. The man picked himself up good-naturedly and held out a friendly hand. The small body had by this time picked itself up also, the bonnet was pushed fiercely back and a voice, muffled by lack of breath greeted him. ’’Hello!” it said, conscious of the amenities, then the body was off once more down the beach in stumbling flight. At intervals the sunbonneted head turned and cast fearful glances over its shoulder. The new minister seated himself again after a look cast in the direction of the house, and chuckled boyishly.
”Finn little beggar!” he said.
”Huh!” said a voice behind him, ”Little gump, yes!” The new minister turned quickly.
”What next?” he laughed, ”That you Billie? Have a seat?” Vanette’s small brother looked calculatingly after the fleeing figure and accepted the offer.
”Guess I will,” he said, his breathing quite rapid and his words hissing slightly by reason of a vacancy in the front of his mouth where once four teeth had stood. He dug his brown heels into the sand and huggd his knees up to his chin. Now and then he spat viciously, the accomplishment was evidently a new one.
”What’s the trouble?” asked the new minister with a slight jerk of his head towards the far end of the beach, ”nice friendly little dispute?”
”Er-huh,” said the boy, ”might it call it that. Th’ kid’s got somethin’ er mine.
She’sotta give it ter me. I want her to do somethin’ fer me, too,” he paused to glance casually down the beach to where a sunbonnet protruded visibly from behind one of the supports of a wharf. ”It kin wait er bit,” he decided, ”I’ll get her yet!” his tone was that of one sure of himself, bidding his time. The new minister smiled discreetly.
”That what you were chasing her for?” he asked. ”I think Billy, you’re not much on persuasion” there was a rueful tone in his voice as a twinge of rememberance struk him. ”Didn’t she want to do what you asked?”
”Says she don’t” amended the boy scornfully, ”I didn’t try any soft soap,” he added as an after thought, ”I told her what she had ter do, told her if she didn’t I’d thump her. That’s the kind er persuadin’ girls like. ’tain’t any use askin’ em ter do things. They gotta be bossed.” He glanced doubtfully at his neighbor. ”Guess yer don’t know much’bout girls” he commented. ”Been asking Van ter do anything? She’s the worst one in the bunch.”
The new minister flushed slightly.
”Huh!” said the boy grinning widely and impishly, ”Betch yer she won’t do it til she knows she gotta. Don’t yer ever ask a girl ter do anythin’, tell her she’s got it ter do. I’m tellin’ yer an’ I know—What all girls needs is ter be

”I wonder” he mused, ”I wonder now—if I’ve got the nerve. It can’t fail much worse than my former method and the advice has certainly come to me now. So we won't go rowing. Sit down and listen while I tell you something instead."

Vanette's eyes were like saucers and the new minister distinctly heard her gasp. "I'm going rowing!" she said but her tone was less decided than usual and the new minister's courage rose.

"No" he heard himself say, "perhaps we'll go rowing after awhile, just now we'll stay here. Sit down please, and he held out his hand. The mastery in his voice was really remarkable.

"Oh" said Vanette weakly and none too eloquently. Then she sat down.

The Iodine Kid.

It was the day of the millennium. For some time the unexpected had happened. The Suffragettes had won in England; the Glendy-Burke had won a debate; Tulane had even been given a gymnasium.

The destruction of the world was at hand. We will not dwell long upon the manner in which this sad affair happened. It has been explained very fully by Prof. Wm. B. Smith in his pamphlet on the (Color Line), in which he proves that it will have an end like any other circular or oval body—that is terminating with a point, in the center of the circumference.

Yes, it is best to pass over the grief which the students at Tulane felt, on seeing their beloved gymnasium destroyed. The one bit of satisfaction which they had was that the school at Baton Rouge fell first.

Events happened very quickly after the end of the world hit New Orleans. The Maison Blanche building as it fell, broke the end off, and the short piece found its way to the French Market, where it was eating bananas by the million. It seemed that the other end of the world would be needed to complete the destruction of New Orleans, but the Sophomores captured the broken piece and welded it on very nicely, and the destruction was soon over with.

It was now time for the good people of New Orleans to be judged. Very few required any special hearing. They knew where they were going, and formed in a huge line. After making sure that the United States Congress, Dr. Cook, and the editors of the Tulane Weekly were in line, the body was marched off groaning and were delivered to their respective summer resorts.

The angels now turned to the left-overs. The person who invented work, and the originator of Tag Day were hauled off after the "Long Line."

The remainder were about to be admitted through the Golden Gates, when a tall, thin person with a figure like a line of steam was discovered. He was brought before the bar, and testified that his name was Leonidas Angus Littlejon. A strong odor of Iodine was noticed, and accused admitted that he had been a chemist, and had written a folio on Iodine. Things looked bad for him, and when he said he had been a student at Tulane, they started to march him after the "Long Line," but the movement was stopped, and the examination proceeded. When it was learned that he was a frequenter of the Victor Theatre, all hope was lost. However at this point it was discovered that only two men from New Orleans were eligible. One was Miss Etak Nodrog, and the other was Carrie Nation. As neither of these came from Tulane, it was decided to admit him. This was done with great rejoicing, as he was the only representative of Tulane admitted.

But he was very unpopular, and in a few days, a petition was handed in for relief, saying he was boring everyone with his monologues on Physical Chemistry.

So he was hailed up once more, and his sentence reversed, and sent to join the "Long Line." But in two days, a strenuous protest arrived. Pluto could stand the odor of Sulphur Dioxide, but Iodine was too much for him. The unhappy culprit, could give no excuse; instead of that, he began to theorize upon whether the odor now emanating from him was Sulphur Iodide, or Iodine Sulphide. This was the last show. A grand consultation was held, and it was decided to banish him.

So a bucket of Phosphorus was poured upon his head, and the poor wretch was sent streaming into outer darkness, where not content with his past misdeeds, he can be seen glowing in the evening darkness on cloudless nights.

On such times he delights in tracing against the dark background, in fiery letters the name so justly honored, Leonidas Angus Littlejon, The Iodine Kid.

Jack Johnson, "Shine Them Up."
As You Take It

There is one thing that Newcomb's Friend, Observer, has not yet discussed in the papers and that is the over-worked condition of the Seniors. Why, just consider Jane La Rue, a girl once clever, capable, and absolutely to be depended upon, now a—well, Mr. Butler says This ought to be published, so here it is.

Jane waked up early on Monday morning declaring she hadn't slept a wink—to hear Newcomb girls talk you would think that insomnia rested on the college like a plague. Perhaps Jane was right though because the night before—but never mind what happened on Sunday night; it isn't in the college curriculum and so has no place in the account of an over-worked Senior. Regardless of the loss of sleep Jane was in a heavenly frame of mind and decided to look after several neglected duties before school. Her first class was History so it didn't matter if she were late—she would get there before Mr. Mason.

During the last few days the Latin teacher had been ill and Jane, who was very fond of her, and had six hours a week in her classes, thought it prudent to keep the lady's room attractive with fresh flowers that she might not pine for lonely Latin text-books. To this end the devoted pupil stopped at the florist's and ordered two dozen carnations—oh, extravagance! Now Jane's hand-bag is something of a young valise aspiring to grow up and be a trunk—you've seen them?—so its not at all surprising that on leaving she should take a small pot of jonquils instead. The boy ran after her and made the exchange so everything was all right.

In History she was greeted with the information that Mr. Butler had referred to her as a "miserable female who never returned a book." Then she disputed a point in Mr. Mason's "theory of history" and you know the result of such a proceeding! The English lesson was not much of a success either from Jane's point of view. The Professor spoke disparagingly of the first love affair of a very young poet and Jane murmured scornfully, "That's all you know about it!" then lapsed into silence—impenetrable silence—for the rest of the hour. That's the girl who was once considered the Star of English 4! It shows what over-work will do! At recess Jane and several friends disputed for ten minutes as to which of three meetings, (scheduled for the same second), had the first claim, and then went to all three at once. So its small wonder that at 12:39 Jane forgot to go to Greek. Instead she read The Love Letters of Sir Walter Scott in the library, and realized just as the bell rang that her essay wasn't on that subject after all. There was so much to do she didn't have time to think. Life was a burden. She couldn't live 'til graduation.

After sitting in the French room for ten minutes Jane awakened to the fact that she was in a Freshman class that was highly amused at her mistake, and that she was due at Psychology across the hall. Dr. Dixon stared coldly when she came in and greeted her with the startling inquiry:
"If equations of the third degree indicate solids, Miss La Rue, what could those of the fourth degree be?"

Without pausing Jane answered absent--ly, (that's the way most people answer in Psychology), "Oh, liquids, Dr. Dixon."

When order was restored the questions began again—Dr. Dixon had stayed awake the night before devising schemes to reform the class. Maud Hill, who had beaten Jane at an election, told the much-afflicted class and the inflicting much Professor that the front part of the brain was called the "Pons Assonorum," and Jane murmured contemptuously that she "always knew the girl was not just right but to have a whole bridge of asses in her head—well, this was too much!"

As she passed the office by some strange chance Jane remembered that she had to arrange for a committee meeting that afternoon, so she went in and the conversation that ensued between her and the secretary was as follows:

"Miss Cage, a committee of boys from Tw-----
"Boys from Tulane! Awful!"
"No they are not, when you know them, Miss Cage, but what I want to know is where can we meet—could we use Miss Stone's room?"
"Of course Not! Why, you'd drive Dr. Butler insane—the ide----!"
"But, Miss Cage, it's a committee meeting, not a prize fight!"
"They are one and the same thing when the Jambalaya is discussed."
"Well, what about the Student Club room?"
"Why, Miss La Rue, I passed there this morning and it hasn't been swept this year—it's a Disgrace to This Institut----"
"Well, let us have the reception room."
"What-Are-You-Talking-About! ! ! The carpet in that room is New—New, I say! It was bought when Dr. Dixon became President of This Institution in 1886!"
"Well, we have to meet somewhere. I suppose I can dust the frat room and------"
"Fraternity room! Impossible! Improper! Shocking! Never take a man in there!"

By this time Jane was thoroughly exasperated—to put it in lady-like terms. She flung around to the telephone to tell the committee not to come or else to meet her at the Fire Department on the corner.

"For the love of Mike!" she exclaimed, but got no further. Two strong arms seized her and a voice of determination cried, "What is that you say? Love! Never utter that word within the sacred precincts of this Institution, unless you bring a note from your father and mother to that effect. And don't you know the telephone hours yet, and you a Senior? Don't you know you can't telephone before 2:30?" It was then 2:20!

While waiting for the clock (or Miss Cage) to make a move, Jane forgot what she had started out to do, and, instead of ringing up the Tulane Refectory, she called a number which she found somewhere in the back of her head and was very much astonished to hear a familiar voice answer,—it was a Cousin of the Dormitory Girls, so of course the conversation was pleasant.

After that Jane decided to go to the dressmaker's—one just couldn't be attractive without pretty clothes. The car was crowded and Jane sat next a timid looking little woman who soon got up and stood in the aisle some distance off. Gradually one passenger after another moved away from Jane's immediate neighborhood until finally she realized that she was repeating aloud her part in the dramatic play. Jane didn't notice when Canal Street was reached nor when the seats were turned back preparatory to the return trip. She stared into space until the conductor said:

"This car goes to Camp and Canal only, Miss.

Much perturbed at her blunder and repeating, "Camp and Canal," as a sort of refrain, Jane stood on the corner waiting for the car which was to take her to her destination. She might have been there yet had not a friendly policeman intimated that "cars here stop on the other corner." Jane was feeling somewhat sore over this succession of blunders so she remarked with a haughty air and a western twang that in Chicago cars always stopped wherever there were people. She had never been to that city but she had a sense of humor. As she handed the conductor her transfer she meant to ask him to put her off at Ursuline Street, so she said:

"Camp and Canal, please."

The conductor looked incredulous but Jane remembering that the cars of everyone are not trained at the Newcomb Music Department, was lenient and repeated mildly, "Camp and Canal."

The conductor was amazed and alarmed but believing her harmless replied, "This is Camp and Canal Miss—do you want to get off? (hopefully).

"Yes, at Ursuline Street," said Jane imperturbably. It really was provoking to be so absent-minded, but it wasn't her fault—she was over-worked. Why, she had forgotten to eat any luncheon! This was a miserable state of affairs! She perused the advertisements in the car with the hope of forgetting how hungry she was, then murmured disconsolately, 'Reading maketh a full man', but what about a woman!"

As she got off, the conductor looked anxiously at her and warned, "Miss be careful of the passing truck."

As days passed and Jane's conduct became more and more alarming the Senior class had a meeting to discuss the matter. After due deliberation it was decided that the only sufficient and appropriate punishment for one whose mind was in such a jumbled condition would be to make her,

"Something-of-a-Jambalaya."
My, but that Freshman Picture caused trouble.

The boys of old Tulane
One day went quite insane—
The root of all the evil was a Gym—
So they hied them out to "track"
While others still stayed back
And buckled down to foot-ball with a will.
Base-ball, tennis crew, what-not Ambitious spirits tried;
And then in chorus with a roar,
"A Gym we want!" they cried.
The madness spread to Newcomb,
The girls laid hold with vim,
Advice was unavailing—
"Indeed, twas not a whim!
Track-team, tennis, crew, what-not Frantic spirits tried;
And then despairing, with a wail
"Defeat we have!" they cried.
Mr. Green, Sophomore.

(Especially Dedicated to Elizabeth).

"Well I'm back at old Tulane! It certainly is good to be here. I had a few conditions to get off this summer but at last I'm out of old Miller's "Four O'clock Tea" class! To be invited to that class of social functions is one of the results of "lady-killing" on school nights. After going to a few of Dr. Miller's receptions a fellow becomes blase and tries "grinding," merely to overcome a peculiar state of mental ennui. When Dr. Miller shakes hands with you and invites you to call again you are so overcome with "emotions" that you forget to tell him what a pleasant time you "have" had. These receptions are extremely popular with the fellows. This is clearly shown by the fact that no one has ever known to regret that he had a previous engagement."

"I intended to come to town several days before Matriculation Day but found out that Sally Jones wasn't coming back to Newcomb until that day. Of course I decided that it was unnecessary to come back so soon myself. It was worth the price of several "Special Conditionals" to travel with Sally. You know Sally, don't you? No? Well you've missed one of the greatest treats of your life. She was the most popular Freshman at Newcomb last year.

On the way down Sally and I were laughing, chatting, and eating chocolates, when I happened to look up and discover something. It didn't need one of old Biological Beyer's microscopes to see that he was a new Freshman. He was such a cute, cunning little fellow that you could not help but examine him closely. His Mama and Papa had evidently fixed him up for college life. He had on a suit of the "previously shrunk" variety,—probably he had been caught in the rain. His hair was parted diagonally in the middle, and the "part" looked like one of those straight lines that Professor Jones' Civil Engineers lay out by crooked means of a transit. His trousers were turned way up and exposed a most harmonious color combination of black and white: black shoes and white socks. He was either affecting the black and white because of an artistic temperament similar to that developed in the Newcomb Art Department, or somebody must have told him that was college style."

Just as we were pulling into the station the conductor came through the car and yelled, "Union Station!" The little Freshman saw several of the fellows near him put on their hats and get their suit-cases. He said to one of them: "This isn't New Orleans, is it? It's only Union Station!"

I went back down town and loled around until I got tired and then I came on up to college to matriculate. Before I went into Miller's office I put my hat in a locker, stuck a pencil over my ear, got a handful of papers, and put one of those wise smiles a la Fortier upon my face. Then I walked right into the "Deanery" with an important air like a Sophomore and a gentleman. All the Freshies stepped aside to let me register and the little Freshie who was on our train came up to me as I was going out and asked me if I wasn't Dr. Kahle. I told him not to get fresh, because you know I'm lots better looking than "Pete."

Things were just about the same as last year, except that there were a good many improvements. Dicky Bruff had had a hair-cut, and Dr. Metz had learnt how to shake hands in a cordial way instead of giving you a grip like a jelly-fish. A night or so before a few of the architects had taken Professor Woodward down town and treated him to a shave. He's right down handsome now that he's got rid of that "dinky" little beard. Jimmy Robert had bought a second-hand automobile and was amusing himself by playing with it out back of the Engineering Building, and old "Greg" had raised a heavy beard that hid his mouth and chin. But the strangest thing of all was happening when I went out on the back steps of Gibson Hall. "Morty" Aldrich was out there shooting "craps" with a bunch of Juniors and Seniors. The fellows said that "Morty" was trying to rearrange the "Distribution of Wealth" and bring about better "Economic Conditions." Whether this "rearrangement" was to benefit the general public or one particular individual no one could discover. I hope he does the same thing next year. If he does I'll bet I skin him, because I used to be a "crap shooter" in my Freshman year.

That night a bunch of the fellows went down town to the show and made plans for handling the Freshman in the next day's "Scrap." We agreed to meet below State Street and come up in college in a bunch. The individual wrestling matches were a joke. They took place early in the day while I was down town. The Sophomores simply "did" the Freshies. It was as easy as "flunking in Dutch". We ended up by going to the "Pit" and what do you suppose we saw there? It's a "cinch" you'd never guess! One of the embryo Freshmen was there and he was "diked" out in a full dress suit, white gloves and all. Some Sophomore had told him no one was allowed in the Tulane unless he was in regular "costume de rigueur." Strange to say, he left before the performance started. After the show we hung around Cusach's Corner for a while and then came back to the dormitory. I went to bed then so as to be in good condition for tomorrow's "Scrap." It was only two o'clock, but I thought I'd better get to bed early.

Well I didn't wake up til nine o'clock the next morning and the first thing I knew somebody was shaking me and yelling, "Get up! It time to go to State Street and meet the bunch!" I had been dreaming that I had a barrel on and was being marched down to Newcomb. It's strange how fresh last year's happenings are in my mind. Well I guess the saying that "Dreams go by contraries" is true. It turned out so in this case anyway. We "hiked" for the meeting place as soon as I got some "duds" on, and we found most of our class there already. We waited until the Freshmen got up to the campus and then we rushed them. They put up a pretty game fight, but it wasn't any use. We "did 'em" good and proper and I took the little Freshie that I had discovered on the train as my special charge. We went on down to Newcomb and Sally had a good chance to look at him. I got to talking and forgot to watch him and he "lit
"nut" as fast as he could go. Two of our fellows chased him and finally caught him. We marched them around town ’till we got tired and then we let them go.

The next Saturday we had the Tug-o'-War and we won. It was a pretty close shave and it looked like the Freshmen were going to beat us for a while. Our fellows got pulled through the pond once and so did the Freshies. It was the dry land pull that decided the matter. I had sprained my ankle in a tussle with a Freshie and couldn’t pull. It was hard luck, but I took Sally and that made up for a lot of things. I showed her some of the sights of the campus and we went through the museum. Sally said the Egyptian mummy was a wonderful likeness of the old “Dutch Professor” at Newcomb. We met Jerry and I told Sally who he was. She thought the “Shop” was fine, but said “Jerry” wasn’t nearly as “cute” as she expected.

Sally showed me the lady who teaches her Latin. She said that nobody ever finished a year in her class without having nervous prostration at least twice. I had heard of her before as every Newcomb girl I know had something nice to say about her. When she was pointed out to me it was quite a surprise. Those girls must be very nervous indeed or else they exaggerate. They have made her real famous. As we were going through Gibson Hall a very loud noise almost deafened us and at first neither of us could imagine what it was. Then it finally dawned on me that it was only Billy Brown talking to himself. He is really a good-natured little chap and I know he didn’t mean to disturb the peace. It certainly is unfortunate to have such an uncontrolable voice, and anyway everybody ought to save his voice for the game. Gee whiz! but won’t Mississippi look like thirty cents—hurrah for Tulane!

It is a mark of some magnanimity to feel any interest in a small town. It is actually self engrossed to a degree. The opinions too you will find some what inclined to rigidity, making the sometimes cited Persian laws seem by comparison the mere kaleidoscope of a South American republic; or a college Pan Hellenic constitution, of which we are told that it changeth not often, but continually. Some such heir-loom opinions we find two neighbors exchanging over the garden fence one morning.

"Good morning! I thought I'd beat you out for once."

"Is that you Jane? No, I've been out long enough to get drenched with these hollyhocks and larkspurs. I declare, I won't have them another year, but they've been growing here so long it is a pity to move them."

"That's what I say. Where's Millicent? Ain't she up yet?"

"No, I'm letting her sleep these mornings. I mean for her to go out every bit she can while she is in town; and she'll need every minute of sleep when Commencement is well on. You know. I think that girl has been down-right neglected."

"How's that! I thought you said they'd sent her off to college, and she looks a pretty likely girl."

"She'll do for looks—though she'll never be the woman her mother was. Such a head of hair you never saw! But that's not what I mean. Yes, she went to college; and what are girls' colleges nowadays?—books and basket-ball and a lot of other girl affairs; and a girl comes out raw and bashful as a baby when it comes to being a young lady and having beaux." "Well, it's a far cry from our time. You remember, Minnie, the boarding-schools used to be the most romantic places on the face of the earth, and I"—

"Of course," the prudent ain't broke in, for she had an axe to grind and couldn't afford to let the subject take a new drift, especially as breakfast hour drew near. "Of course, and what was the result of it? A girl learned something of conduct, and how to get along for herself; and here we are all married and comfortable, and these college girls are perfectly hopeless. For goodness sake! make Charley come over here right away and see Millicent. If any boy can start a girl to thinking of beaux, and get her to talk about something besides topics, I should think he could, from all I've heard of him."

"Oh! Charley's a lady's-man if ever there was one. But I give you fair warning. You know Mrs. Beauman wanted him to come to see that young cousin of hers. Let me see, ----what was her name? Oh you know,---- came from Cedar Creek Commencement before last,---- and I tell you her mother was"-----

"Oh! you mean Susie?"

"No, not Susie, it was Lucy!----Lucy Beauman. Well Mrs. Beauman wanted him to come to see her, and he told her, "you better look out Mrs. Beauman. You know, if I can have a girl to myself on a moonlight night and bring my guitar along, she'll kiss me if I have just met her that morning." Of course, that was just his talk, but the girls get to like him mighty well. I haven't seen one come here yet that he couldn't rush for three or four weeks, if he felt like it that long, and cut the other boys out right and left."

"Well, if he can get Milly warmed up to saying eight words on a stretch, he's just what she needs. You send him over. There's my bell! Can't you drop over with your sewing this morning?"

"I'll see. It depends on whether that man comes to fix my stove-pipe----never had such trouble."

Mrs. Holliwell felt that she had resolved on a rather desperate expedient, for Charley Gaynor was accepted by the town as an infallible lady-killer, and like other butterfly-netters, he rarely made a capture without rubbing off a little down from the pretty creature's wings. Still Millicent's case seemed to demand forcible handling.

"The thing I'm worried about," the anxious chaperone confided to her husband, "is that she will take him just as some new girl, and treat him so matter-of-fact that he'll get tired of playing the gallant. Or more likely still, she'll just let him talk himself out and never see what he's driving at. Milly's such a born innocent!"---this last with a fierceness that made Mr. Holliwell smile as he thought how much better his own word "fool" would have fitted the temper of the phrase. But his wife went on. "And if she did see, she'd be perfectly helpless! I'm going to have my hands full with that girl."

"Miss Millicent, shall we take this road? It loops around a little lake out here in the woods and comes back into town by another pretty road."

"Why certainly, I suppose you know the roads better than I do. I'm sure this is very pretty." Here followed a long pause, longer perhaps than even the fine May afternoon and pretty country roadside could justify. Charlie the beautiful improved his time by gradually lapsing into a soulful musing air that had been known to bring the conversation around on former occasions. However, hearing no bid of a penny or even far below par for his thoughts, he reluctantly interrupted a particularly fine horizon scan, and looked around cautiously to see if this reported lamb could possibly be trying the same game. Nothing could have been more reassuring on that point. She was watching the wheel ruts. Feeling uncomfortably that she must begin being agreeable and remembering her aunt's solemn commands not to talk of anything remote, she too looked up reluctantly and ventured:

"I wonder why they run in separate ruts?"

"What, the wheels?"

"Yes, the front one and the back one. You'd think the horse is pulling them the same way and they would run in the same rut, but they don't."

"That's because they don't know how much the trap always separates them.

"But they would be if they could be, you mean. Aren't you glad we are not wheels?"---this with his deepest glance.
“I don’t know. I never thought of it.”

“Oh! I see. The main trouble between those two now,” he leaned over unnecessarily to indicate the wheels on her side, “is with that little coquettish front wheel. The back one is willing enough to be friends. It’s that little front one that always keeps her distance——so coy, just like some people I know.”

Millicent seemed to lose interest in the wheels. “When do we get to the lake you spoke about?” she asked.

“No for a long time I hope. Don’t you? You know, Mil—I almost called you Millicent——when we get under those beech trees, it’s called ‘Lovers’ Lane.’

“Do you think we’ll meet any?”

“Do you think they’ll meet any?”

Here followed a pause, somewhat awkward and pre-occupied for the girl, but a pleasant mean-time of anticipation for Charles the beautiful, who could hardly restrain an exuberant fellow-feeling for little Jack Horner. His next tack was already planned, and was of tested efficacy to produce rapid confusion and capitulation with warier game than this. By way of skilful introduction.

“Do you know if mistletoe grows on beeches?” he said.

“I don’t know much about trees, but I love flowers.” She spoke rather hurriedly for one who usually found conversation difficult. “Do you see that cherokee rose? I’d give it for you!”

This formed an opening quite as pretty as his own.

“All right! I take you up on that.”

“Oh! I’m afraid that will be too much trouble. It’s across the ditch, and way up the bank, and the bush is so thorny.”

“I never mind a few pricks so I get the rose,” he said with due significance.

So it seemed indeed, for he was enmeshed in the wicked little thorns when something curious happened. The trap started off at a really astonishing rate.

“Hello! Is he running away? Who! Buckeye, whoa. Wait a minute I’ll catch him.”

But that was easier said than done.

*********

“Why, what became of Charley?” asked Mrs. Holliwell as her niece drove up alone. Millicent was unusually communicative. “He had to get out on the way back, to get a little present for me he said, and he won’t be coming home for an hour or two, so I brought his horse back for him.”

“Oh! you did.”

Millicent was hitching the horse at the Gaynor post, so perhaps she did not observe the ominous pause after this. Then her aunt slightly recovered her balance. “Run up stairs,” she said, “and dress for tea. Two very nice young men are coming around.”

Millicent ran too fast to hear the tempest break below.

“A little present for her! Oh he’s kissed the blarney stone. But I didn’t think it would be as bad as this. Of all cool impudence! And she put up with it. It’s exactly what I expected.”

Oh-h-h! — Let's be quiet!!

Sh-h-h!

They're having a frat meeting in there!!

Tuesday Afternoon at New College

Well, she wears fucking.

You must come in order!!

Let's have a party!!

I will blackball her!!

I won't pay another cent!!

I hate rushing.
A Shepherd to His Lass.

Come into the fields with me!
There I'll pipe my lute for thee,
Seated by some winding brook,
In a shady, quiet nook
Where the cooling, morning breeze
Maketh music in the trees,
And the blooming Scotland bell
Flingeth music on the dell,
And the brilliant marigold
And the daffodils unfold
All their beauty to the skies;
Make the fallen spirits rise.
Gloaden both the young and old
And will give my lute a soul.
Come, and from the cares be free.
Come, my love, my lover be.

SONNET.

Though much we suffer on this mundane sphere
Yet all our pains above recorded are.
And when we've shed our last, our parting tear.
And Death's dark angel's carried us afar
To realms unknown in his cold, clammy car.
Who suffered and repeated most shall be
The most absolved from all those sins which scar
Their souls, and most from hellish tortures free;
Whilst those who, living, more the balm did taste
And burnt the midnight oil, and who did waste
Their hours pleasing vice and such desires
As fill a foolish mortal's brain with fires
Of vulgar ecstasy, instead of love
Of Him, shall nothing pardoned be above.
Last Will and Testament of the Class of 1910.

Realizing the uncertainty of life upon this planet, also the shortness of our existence as a body in college, we, the Class of 1910, being of sound mind and judgment, do hereby make this, our last will and testament, same to take effect the day after our departure from this college.

1. To Tulane University, our beloved Alma Mater, we hereby bequeath one (1) alarm clock, with which to awaken college spirit.
2. To E. B. Craighead, the Globe-Trotter, its President, we bequeath one (1) round trip ticket, good on any slow train in the United States.
3. To Dean Walter Miller, our hospitable friend, we bequeath all of our "pink tea" invitations.
4. To Miss Minnie M. Bell, the All-Observing, we bequeath one (1) good-sized ear trumpet, with which to hear all that goes on in the library.
5. To Morton A. Aldrich, an authority on the shoe industry, we bequeath one (1) pair of number thirteen (13) brogan shoes.
6. To Douglas S. Anderson, the Silent, we bequeath the privilege to talk to the Newcomb girls, when he escorts them to the platform on graduation day.
7. To Samuel J. Barnett, the Light Heavyweight, we bequeath one (1) thirteen ounce (13 oz.) paper-weight to keep him "precisely" in his place.
8. To Reginald S. Cocks, the Botanist, we bequeath the privilege of planting coffee-weeds in the old Glendy-Burke meeting-room.
9. To William Horse-Power Creighton, we bequeath one (1) thirteen-jackass power (13 h. p.) hot air engine.
10. To Albert B. Dinwiddie, the Unfinisher, we bequeath the privilege of completing the text-book in Senior Mathematics.
11. To Allee Fortier, a loyal Frenchman, we bequeath thirteen-hundred (1300) pretzels, also one (1) full stein, with which to celebrate the loss of Alsace-Lorraine.
12. To George E. Beyer, the Beyerologist, we grant a license to raise doll-weevils on the third floor of Gibson Hall.
13. To William Benjamin Gregory, of Cornell, we bequeath a history of the freaks and sports of Cornell University.
14. To Joseph M. Gwinn, from Missouri, we bequeath one (1) season ticket to every show at the Lyric Theatre.
15. To Owen M. Jones, a Teller of Tales, we bequeath the degree of J. O. K. E., together with all the rights and privileges pertaining to same.
16. To Ulrich B. Phillips, the Grind, we bequeath twenty-three hundred (2300) library tickets, same to be distributed among his students, also thirteen hundred (1300) candles for his own use.
17. To John C. Ransmeir, a loyal German, we bequeath thirteen (13) bottles of "Vichy," also one (1) full demijohn of French wine with which to celebrate Napoleon Bonaparte's first victory upon German soil.

19. To Henry F. Ragan, the Dude and authority on iron ores, we bequeath: one (1) twenty-three pound (23 lb.) "goose," together with a peremptory command to take off his hat to all Tulane students.

20. To "Bob" Sharp, the Skeleton, we bequeath text-books adequate enough for use in the Senior English Class.

21. To William Benjamin Smith, the Philosopher, we bequeath a letter of introduction to Faust's great friend, Mephistopheles (another philosopher).

22. To William Woodward, we bequeath one (1) bucket of garnet, also one (1) bucket of blue paint, with which he shall paint "1910" upon the tank.

23. To Edward A. Bechtel, the Small, we bequeath the privilege to wear "the grin that will not wash off."

24. To "Pammy" Caldwell, "King of all Flunkers," we bequeath the privilege to relieve St. Peter as watchman at the Golden Gate, for twenty-three (23) centuries.

25. To L. W. Wilkinson, the Saint, we bequeath one (1) certificate of life membership in the Anti-Prohibition League of America.

26. To Messrs. S. S. Labouisse, M. H. Goldstein, and Allison Owen, architects, we bequeath the privilege to build chicken roosts and pigeon houses in the old Forum meeting-room.

27. To B. W. N. Bagot, the Newcomer and Freshman, we bequeath the privilege of becoming sporty.

28. To P. Jorda Kahle, the Benedict, we bequeath one (1) copy of the famous hymn, "I Love My Wife, but Oh, You Kid!"

29. To James M. Robert, the Benedict, we bequeath one (1) perpetual lease on the telephone line between his class-room and his house.

30. To Walter S. Berry, the Classical Lad, we bequeath all the law practice in ancient Rome.

31. To Leonidas R. Littleton, the Chicken-Scratcher, we bequeath one (1) copy-book.

32. To E. S. Perry of Alabama, we bequeath the privilege to exhibit in public, on graduation day, the latest "two-step" of his native state.

33. To Alfred H. Schmidt, of Missouri, we bequeath one (1) season ticket to every show at the Dauphine Theatre.

34. To Harry H. Strauss, the Classical Student, we bequeath the privilege to spend another year in flirting with old maids.

Drawn up on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and ten.

Tulane University, New Orleans, La.
I love my postman, but oh you letter!

What next?
What Was Sung In Chapel the Day Before the February Exams.

"Work, for the exams are coming,
Work thro' the midnight hours,
Fill darkest hours with labor,
Work, or you will flunk.
Work till the dawn comes nearer,
Burn all your midnight oil,
Work, for the exams are coming,
Work, or you will flunk.

M——, organ-grinder.

Alas.

Alas, how few do over do
The things they haven't done;
And oh, the few who over woo
The maids they haven't won!

Just such are they of rich array
Who cease not their complaining,
Or poorest poor, because secure,
Kick 'cause they have no claiming!

The only way to safely say,
The safest way to take 'em,
Is boil them down' and stir them roun'
As small as you can shake 'em.

Nor never fear, — they'll disappear;
But here's the point to schemin';
The world goes roun', now boil them down,
And you'll see less of "seemin'".
Seven Wonders of Tulane.

PROLOGUE.

We've dreamed and dreamed for many years
Our dreams have come to naught;
We've asked and always failed to get
The answers that we've sought.

In answer to our questions just
We've got the same reply
We wonder what that answer means
"We'll have them bye and bye."

WONDER NO. 1.

O, when will Newcomb fair be moved
Upon our campus green,
And we can make the girls a call
And still avoid the Dean?

WONDER NO. 2.

O, when will cease the President
To sing his oft repeated strain
"We'll have it all arranged next year?"
Next year we'll hear the song again.

WONDER NO. 3.

We wonder when the day will come
When we can say with rising pride,
"There stands our great gymnasium."
Or must we say, "Somebody lied?"

WONDER NO. 4.

"A chair in speaking we will have;"
They've told us every year;
We need a chair in music too,
When will we have them here?

WONDER NO. 5.

When will the often-promised game
With L. S. U. be played?
To play and lose the championship
We're not at all afraid.

WONDER NO. 6.

We wonder when the T. A. A.
Will not be still in debt,
And for the sum of fifty cents
Our tickets we can get.

WONDER NO. 7.

Our pocket-books are growing slim,
When will the dunning cease?
When will those dues be paid at last
And we can live in peace?

P. E. B. '11.
Sophomores vs. Freshmen

Scene in the Library just before the bell is about to ring.
Vain work, I say,
To study all day.
Less you study the professors too.
These lines devine
On our doctors fine
Will probably benefit you.

"Miller, the dean,
Is awful mean."
So all the engineers say.
"Take a classical course
You're the pull and the force
To pass on the final day."

Little Bacchus Bechtel
Will give you —
If you don't know the map of Greece,
Where Rome is too,
Where olives grew,
Whether Cyrus the younger ate geese.

Professor Fortier,
Il parle Francais.
And raves about Napoleon, the great.
With Phillips on Medeavel man.
Agree with him they say.
Join Le Cercle Francais
And you'll pass as sure as fate.

Kahle is a sport—
That's his strong forte
Just go to him and say:
"I was out last night,
My head feels a fright—"
"Well I'll give you a ten today."

For an A tell Sharp
That you love the harp
Of Apollo and the Muses nine
That you like Shakespere,
That Milton's a dear.
That Browning's poems are devine.

To make a hit with Brown
Put on a wise frown,
Try to look intelligent, and say:
"That short story's good,
I wish I could Write in De Maupassant's way."

Der Deutsche Verein
Is simply fine
If you belong to Ransmeier's band,
Read Schiller, drink beer.
And say: "Next year
I shall visit the dear Fatherland."

If you want to pass
In Demwiddie's class
Hand in the outside work every day.
If some you can't do
Ask him to show you,
He'll give you as much anyway.

Don't start an argument—
Unless on trouble bent—
Learn the craft gild,
Look wise, sit still,
He'll rattle you if he can.

Smith the ladies' man
Will not marry if he can.
As no philosophers do.
In class room he's deep:
Give ear, don't sleep,
And hand in your theses on time.

On examination day
If Aldrich should say:
"Before the war why was wheat so high?"
Write a blue book on food
And at last conclude
"It hinges on demand and supply."
Veni, Vidit, Cucurrit.

In days of old, a Freshman bold (?)
Came to matriculate:
On errand bent he proudly went
The school to investigate.

He looked around and saw aground
A crowd of Sophomores.
This Freshman felt his courage melt
When he did hear the roars.

As he discerned, so back he turned,
And with a mighty stride,
On errand bent this time he went
To save his scalp and hide.

James Peirce.
All the World Loves a Lover.

When a fellow goes wooing,
It's like the doves cooing,
There's 'a devil a lot o' noise made;
'Cause first the old father
Appears — a big bother!
That's why this statement I paid.

If they sit in the parlors,
There are sure to be callers
To turn the two lovers away;
Or perhaps in the lobby,
"Why Pa has a hobby
Of smoking at this time o' day."

Then mother is looking
That the young man likes cooking,
That daughter is able to do;
And Bobby is waiting
A nickel for plating
Pa's slippers for evening with glue.

And there's no use in kicking,
For now baby's licking
Your face and your hands, "Ain't she cute?"
And as far as behaving,
You've got to be saving
Your temper, or else lose your suit.

And while you're proposing,
And think the folks dozing,
And right in the midst of your speech,
Why under the sofa,
The darn little loafer
Is Bobby, who's eating a peach.

Then after you've taken
Your hat and hands shaken
You tell your best girl just good day;
For its the style not the mother,
But for the kid brother
"To give his sweet sister away."

GUSTE.
I will excuse all students from their classes who attend my 11 o'clock athletic association meeting in the chemistry building. The question is, shall we go into the S.I.A.A.?!!

E. M. Frenche.
Der Deutsche Professor.

Dedicated to the Deutsche Verein.

In der Tulane Universität,
Giebt es viele grosse Männer,
Statt nennen sich Gelächter,
Sind sie stützig als Gelehrter.

Nun ich bitte um Verzeihung,
Sollt' ich jemand Anstoss geben,
Doch um euch aufmerksam machen
Will ich jetzt lüchtzig streben.

Von all den Professoren
In unserer Universität
Die am wenigsten ich liebe,
Darf ich nicht sagen recht.

Den Herr Professor Johann,
Johann Ransmeier ich mein,
Hab ich gewisz am liebsten,
Denn er kam quer durch den Rhein

Wahrhaftig tut's mir leid, mein Freund
Dasz all die Professoren,
Nicht kamen durch den selben Lauf
Unseres lieblichen Matrosen.

Er ist der beste Lehrer,
Der ganzen Fakultät.
Warum soll er nicht so sein?
Von Deutschland hier direkt!

Johann ist mit dem Kaiser
Und der Königin bekannt.
Er kennt das ganze Königrum
Das durchaus Deutschland spannt.

Er weiszt alles über Goethe,
Und über Schiller auch,
Und Heinrich von der Vogelweide,
Der asz so viel Sauerkraut.

Johann kennt Otto Bismarck
Schöpfer des deutschen Reichs,
Der trank sein Lager Beer so oft.
Er war dem Xilpferd gleich.

Und auch den Graf von Moltke,
Voss, Opitz, Wieland, Sachs,
Den Reformatör Luther,
Der ging von Weimar aus.

So konnte ich fortsetzen,
Von heut' bis Gerichtszeit.
Über Ransmeier schreibend,
Und Deutschland lang und breit.

Der Doktor tritt das Zimmer ein,
Und nimmt das Textbuch auf,
Geht seine Geschäftstube ein,
Und zurück in voltem Lauf.

Dann öffnet er den Appell
Flucht die Abwesender.
Sagt, "Herr Mysing, halt das Maul,
Da spricht's du zu viel wieder."

Und, "Lavine, warum kommst du spät.
Ordentlich jeden Tag?
Kannst du nicht andersverse thun?
Du kommett wenn du magst."
Er wendet sich Johann Rice zu.
Und spricht mit lauter Stimme,
"Verdammter Bonenkopf bist du Und wirst so bleiben immer."

Zunächst kehrt er dem Lichtkopf zu
Er rasend sagte ihm,
"Du verdammter Spitzbub; Wie kann man sein so grün?"

"Herr Meyer bitte lesen,"
Dann liest der Bube vor.
Herr Ransmeier wirft das Buch nach ihm
Und knurrt, "Du großer Thor."

Nun hält er eine Vorlesung, Schaltet die armen Kinder.
Schwört, "Jederman wird fehlen,
Und gewiss musz bleiben hinder.

Zuletzt sieht er Herrn Hopkins
Der grünt von Ohr bis Ohr.
Er ist gebeten um zu lesen.
Gerade las er vor.

"Schön", schreibt der Doktor.
Dann er nimmt die Feder an.
Hopkins bleibt aufmerksam.
Als er steckt ein fünf daran.

Und als der Hopkins zeigt den Zorn,
Werlein, Dalche, Voss,
Lächeln und spaszen ihn,
"Hopkins, was ist los?"

Auf einmal lätet laut der Klang.
Jede Gesicht sich ändert.
"Ein tausend Zeilen nächsten Mal."
Und die Lexion wird endet.

WITH A STEIN ON THE TABLE
AND A GOOD SONG RINGING CLEAR
"1912."

To clear the hurdles in the race
Gives some delight profound;
In silks and gems and frothy lace
The joy of some is found;
Some love to pore thru all their days
Over some stale classic thing;
For me, I am content the praise
Of Nineteen Twelve to sing.

So, here's a toast to the class we boast,
The class of Nineteen Twelve.
It can't be beat; there's naught so sweet
To us as Nineteen Twelve.

We do not wait for cap and gown
Or hood of thrilling hue
Before we start to show the town
The great things we can do;
Whatever movement there may be,
For the good of "Bronze and Blue."
It's worth the doing, why "J'y suis——"
The class One Nine One Two.

So, here's a toast to the class we boast,
The class of Nineteen Twelve.
It can't be beat; there's naught so sweet
To us as Nineteen Twelve.

Oh, let who will for treasure delve,
Of power sing the worth;
I'd rather be a Nineteen Twelve
Then lord of all the earth.
The class that's best in everything—
It's rivals, oh, how few!—
Is the matchless class of which we sing,
The class One Nine One Two.

So, here's a toast to the class we boast,
The class of Nineteen Twelve.
It can't be beat; there's naught so sweet
To us as Nineteen Twelve.
